Dear Sis,

Remember when we couldn't stand each other in Rick's band, and look, now we're sisters. We had a lot of fun playing tennis & stuff like that.

I have a lot to say. Remember getting together after Jimmy Niska was punched in the nose by Paloz. We've got to get together again this year 'cause we had a blast last year. It's kind of bad

Dear Lisa about Greg, now his English has been very different this year since I met you! I never thought I could fit in so well! We all are a bunch of loud-mouthed odd-balls & it's been terrific! Keep nice & crazy and you'll go far!

SPECIAL MOMENTS

Just when the dull routine of books and homework began to drive students up a wall, it happened! Some special moment occurred that made the school year almost bearable. One memorable event was, of course, the Junior-Senior Prom sponsored by the Junior Class. The elegantly decorated Carlisle in Lombard served as the site for the Prom last spring and offered students the chance to experience an evening of elegant social life. Graduation also provided a well-remembered moment in time as graduating seniors reminisced over their high school years, and envious juniors hoped that the coming year would pass as quickly for them. The first day of school was perhaps a most special event for incoming freshmen. Unprepared for the mob scenes in the cafeteria and hallways, the newness and excitement of that first day afforded many frustrating but humorous memories.

In-school assemblies brightened the school year by giving both students and teachers a welcome break from classes. Assemblies given by the Music Department at Christmas time and by the Jazz Band after the holidays provided musical appreciation along with professional entertainment by talented peers.

1) Prom's magic touches couples as they sway to the theme song, "This One's for You." 2) Homecoming Queen Sue Zurawski beams at her escort Joe Keating during the special coronation ceremony. 3) Providing assistance during the hectic moments before graduation, Ms. Janet Lochridge assists Rose Dangles in locating her place in line. 4) The first day of school finds droves of students awaiting textbooks for their classes. 5) In-school events, such as the performance by the Jazz Band, offer welcome breaks from classes.

Council sets the pace for student activities

"I feel that a student council is an important aspect of any school," stated Ms. Katherine Flaherty, adviser of the student activity. "I think that the purpose of Student Council should be to represent the whole school body. It's an organization that should make the students aware of the school's activity and provide school spirit." Student Council was one of the main forces behind many special school activities. Halloween was one source of student participation engineered by the Student Council. Halloween Dress-Up Day provided students with many humorous sights as costumed friends and teachers made this varied school day memorable. Besides sponsoring dances, playnights, and the annual Battle of the Bands, Student Council contributed holiday cheer at Christmas time by giving gifts by drawing lucky seniors, juniors, sophomores, and freshmen. Faculty members were not overlooked and received giant candy canes in daily drawings. Students sporting the best Christmas costumes and the best decorated lockers also received prizes.

1) In a whimsical tribute to the football teams, Debbie Martinek, Debbie Denhard, and Diana Jaworek entertain at coronation. 2) "Flashing" a Halloween message, Joann Marciszewski participates in the MWSC's Halloween dressup. 3) Council Members Mary Vrchota and Doreen Preber view the gifts to be awarded to students as the council's gesture of Christmas spirit. 4) Bob Stackley portrays Steve Martin at the Christmas assembly.

1) Perfecting timing and coordination, members of the Baton Club practice at a weekly meeting. 2) With her eyes intent on her airborne baton, Sandy Mullennax hopes to make a successful catch. 3) While enjoying the day at Brookfield Zoo, Booster Club Members Joann Kakacek, Peggy Finn, and Bonnie Kovacic visit their adopted bear. 4) As part of her duty as a PTO Parents' Night Guide, Ruby Sales helpfully directs a puzzled mother to her next class.

Boosters 'bear up' under spirited causes

Individually or as a group, members of the Booster Club radiated the school spirit that was so very essential to the success of Morton's teams. The main purpose of the Booster Club was to spread school spirit throughout the student body. Along with supporting the various teams and sparking student interest, Booster Club found many worthwhile causes in which to become involved. Its members sponsored a Kodiak bear by the name of "Dinca" living at the Brookfield Zoo. The job of sponsoring the bear included paying for his food for an entire year. Another activity undertaken by the Boosters was offering assistance as guides for College Night and also for the PTO Parents' Night.

Performing agile routines during the homecoming parade, Baton Club members provided their own kind of school spirit. Although it was the first year that they didn't perform at wrestling matches, members met on a regular basis and concentrated on improving their techniques.

The pep assemblies, both mandatory and voluntary, also helped further school spirit. These two clubs and assembly efforts led the way for others to win the battle against apathy and instill school and team pride into students.

Cheerleaders nab trophies

For the cheerleading squad, the year turned out to be one of awards. After winning first place at Illinois State, they proceeded to a competition sponsored by the Dynamic Cheerleading Association at Proviso East. The varsity squad took first place ahead of nineteen other high school squads. The cheerleaders provided entertainment and promoted school spirit. As stated by Debbie Sinnott, "Cheerleading encourages fans to get rowdy at games. It also gives fans something to look at during breaks in the game."

The Pom Pon Girls also did their share of competing and winning. At Rich Central High School, the squad took second place in originality, third place in prop dance, and another third in kickline. Dawn Mangini, Peggy Gilbert, and Diana Jaworek composed the award winning dances. At the end of a year of competition, the squad had accumulated ten awards: five first places, two of which were earned in the originality category and three in overall competition; one second place; three third places; and a squad showmanship trophy. They also earned the ranking of third best in the Midwest.

Whether competing or just having fun, the pom pons and cheerleaders comprised a large part of the school's extra-curricular activities. "I enjoy dancing and being actively involved in what I do. I feel a sense of pride knowing I am part of a successful organization that has a very good reputation," said Pom Pon Captain Diana Jaworek.

Track Aids run marathon smoothly

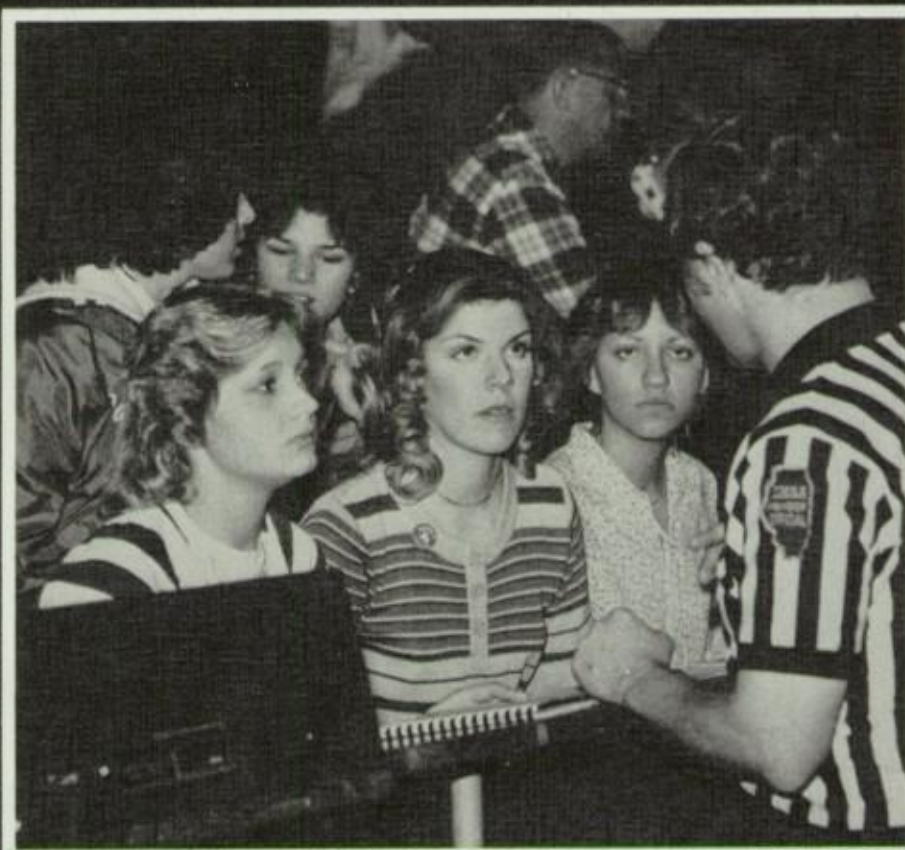

Working at Berwyn's annual Houby Parade, West's Track Aids participated in organizing the Houby Run down Cermak Road. The girls passed out numbers and t-shirts before the race and afterwards tallied scores and places. In this way Track Aids not only gave a needed helping hand at school meets but also exhibited their community awareness.

One of the largest of the sport aid groups, the Swim Maids, performed a vital service. The girls held the responsibility of timing all girls' and boys' swim meets. Their times were then used to double check those registered by the poolside electronic scoreboard.

These aid groups and other service-oriented clubs, as explained by Wrestling Aid Lori Boyd, "Keep up school spirit, aid coaches, and at the same time provide fun."

THE SPORTING LIFE

Whenever the weather permitted, and sometimes when it didn't, students at Morton West combined pleasure with exercise as they participated in a multitude of unorganized sports. Dedicated "net-men," taking out their frustrations on an innocent looking fuzz-covered ball, jammed the tennis courts to capacity. Football enthusiasts played out their aggressions in nearby parks and parking lots in games which while they weren't the Super Bowl were still far from boring. The sport of running, lately known as jogging, was another favorite pastime for health fans. Students could be seen at crazy times and in all kinds of weather running their Adidas off. The newly-popular sport of racquetball presented a chance to show off students' athletic prowess. This fast-paced game of agility, action, and concentration put a whole new dimension on ball-oriented games and offered students a chance to participate in a sport that up until recently only the wealthy could enjoy. Many youth centers joined up with well-equipped racquet clubs to provide interested teens with good instruction at a nominal fee. No matter what the sport, however, Morton students sweated as they found fun and good health.

1) Joining exercise with the fun of a sport, students join in an informal game of touch football. 2) Eying the ball, Kathy Peters plans a blistering backhand to her opponent. 3) Taking advantage of a free day, West students hit the trail for a little "horsing around." 4) For the armchair athlete electronic football provides a challenging substitute for the real thing. 5) With knees bent for balance, Frank Yuen attempts a tricky Frisbee catch.

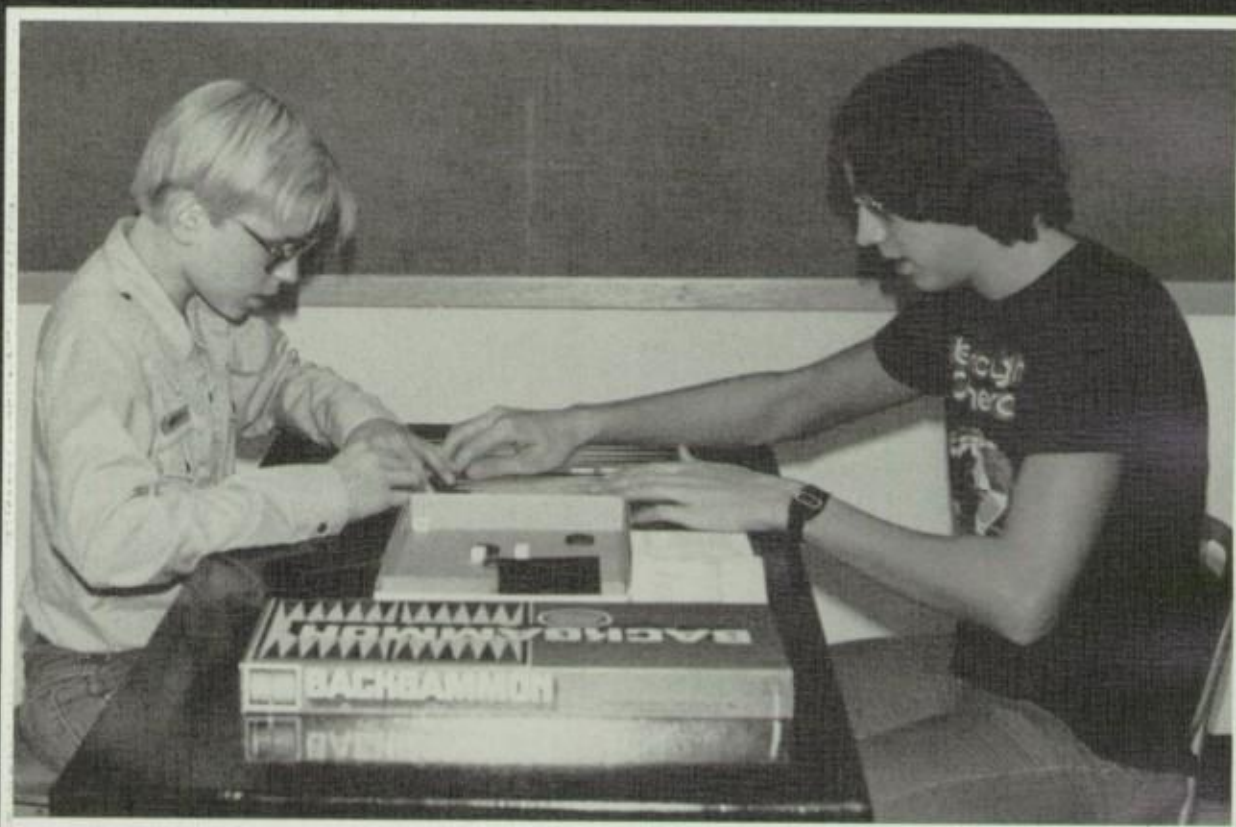

Daytime trip, first of its kind for Ski Club

"I love to ski, and it's a lot of fun." Mike Hammond's explanation shows why he and many students like him joined the Ski Club. Instead of the usual after school trips, Ski Club arranged its first daytime outing. Members left early in the morning, spent the entire day on the slopes, and returned home late in the day. The daytime ski trip was practical in two ways. Besides providing more time on the slopes, it gave the club's old members the new sensation of daylight skiing. "That's the purpose of the club," stated Carol Lacey. "It provides students with a new experience."

Like their counterparts in athletics, members of the Chess and Backgammon Club competed in a Des Plaines Valley League tournament. This tournament distributed trophies for winning teams and for outstanding players. The Chess and Backgammon Club also sponsored an invitational in March in which neighboring schools participated. "This sport brings out the meaning of the word challenge and tells you what strategy is," said Rosemary Waligorski.

'Reminiscing' makes waves

After discussing all possibilities, members of the Swim Club chose "Reminiscing" as the theme of the 1978 swim show. Popular songs including "Even Now," "The Way We Were," "Those Were the Days," and, of course, "Reminiscing" were used to carry out the theme and accompany swimmers' synchronized moves. The club's new adviser, Miss Sue Hoffman, offered useful guidance and saw that all aspects of the show went well. After "Reminiscing's" three-night run ended, the Swim Club continued to meet on land as a social organization. Karen Ljungberg, treasurer, commented, "Everyone works together to make the show and other activities a success."

Three days a week after school, members of the Boxing Club brought a different sort of action to the wrestling room. "The physical contact of hitting someone under the supervision of a referee is fun," explained Tom Vinyard. Besides its recreational aspects, the art of boxing taught members to sharpen their reflexes and defend themselves. Adviser Mr. Craig Hodges shared his boxing knowledge with the club.

1) Hoisted into the air by Joe Albanese, Karen Goering gracefully arches her back and beams for the audience. 2) Steadying themselves in a six man pyramid, Swim Club members show off the precision that made 'Reminiscing' a hit. 3) After receiving a smashing blow from Tom Vinyard, Gene Scala attempts to recover his balance and return a similar jab during a Boxing Club sparring session.

JOB SCENE

Activity in the hallways rapidly diminished as the 2:20 bell signalled the end of another academic day. Crowds of students streamed out of classrooms and began a part of their lives commonly referred to as working. Reasons for taking on the added burden of a job were as varied as the students themselves. Saving for college, meeting new people, and taking an interest in used car ads headed the list for young workers. Students' views concerning their part-time jobs also revealed a wide range of opinions. "Brookfield Zoo! I love it. It's really nice because you're outside all summer and you get to meet a lot of good friends," bubbled Bonnie Kovacic. "I enjoy my work because we work as friends, not employees," agreed Tom Kadolph, speaking of his job at the Copper Mug Restaurant. Expressing his point of view, Larry Baker remarked, "It's not that great, but it's money." Freshman Mark Siviskas revealed his own optimistic view of the future by punning, "No, I don't have a job but I'm working on it." No matter what their opinion, students all agreed that working was an essential part of asserting the independence and financial responsibility needed for their future endeavors.

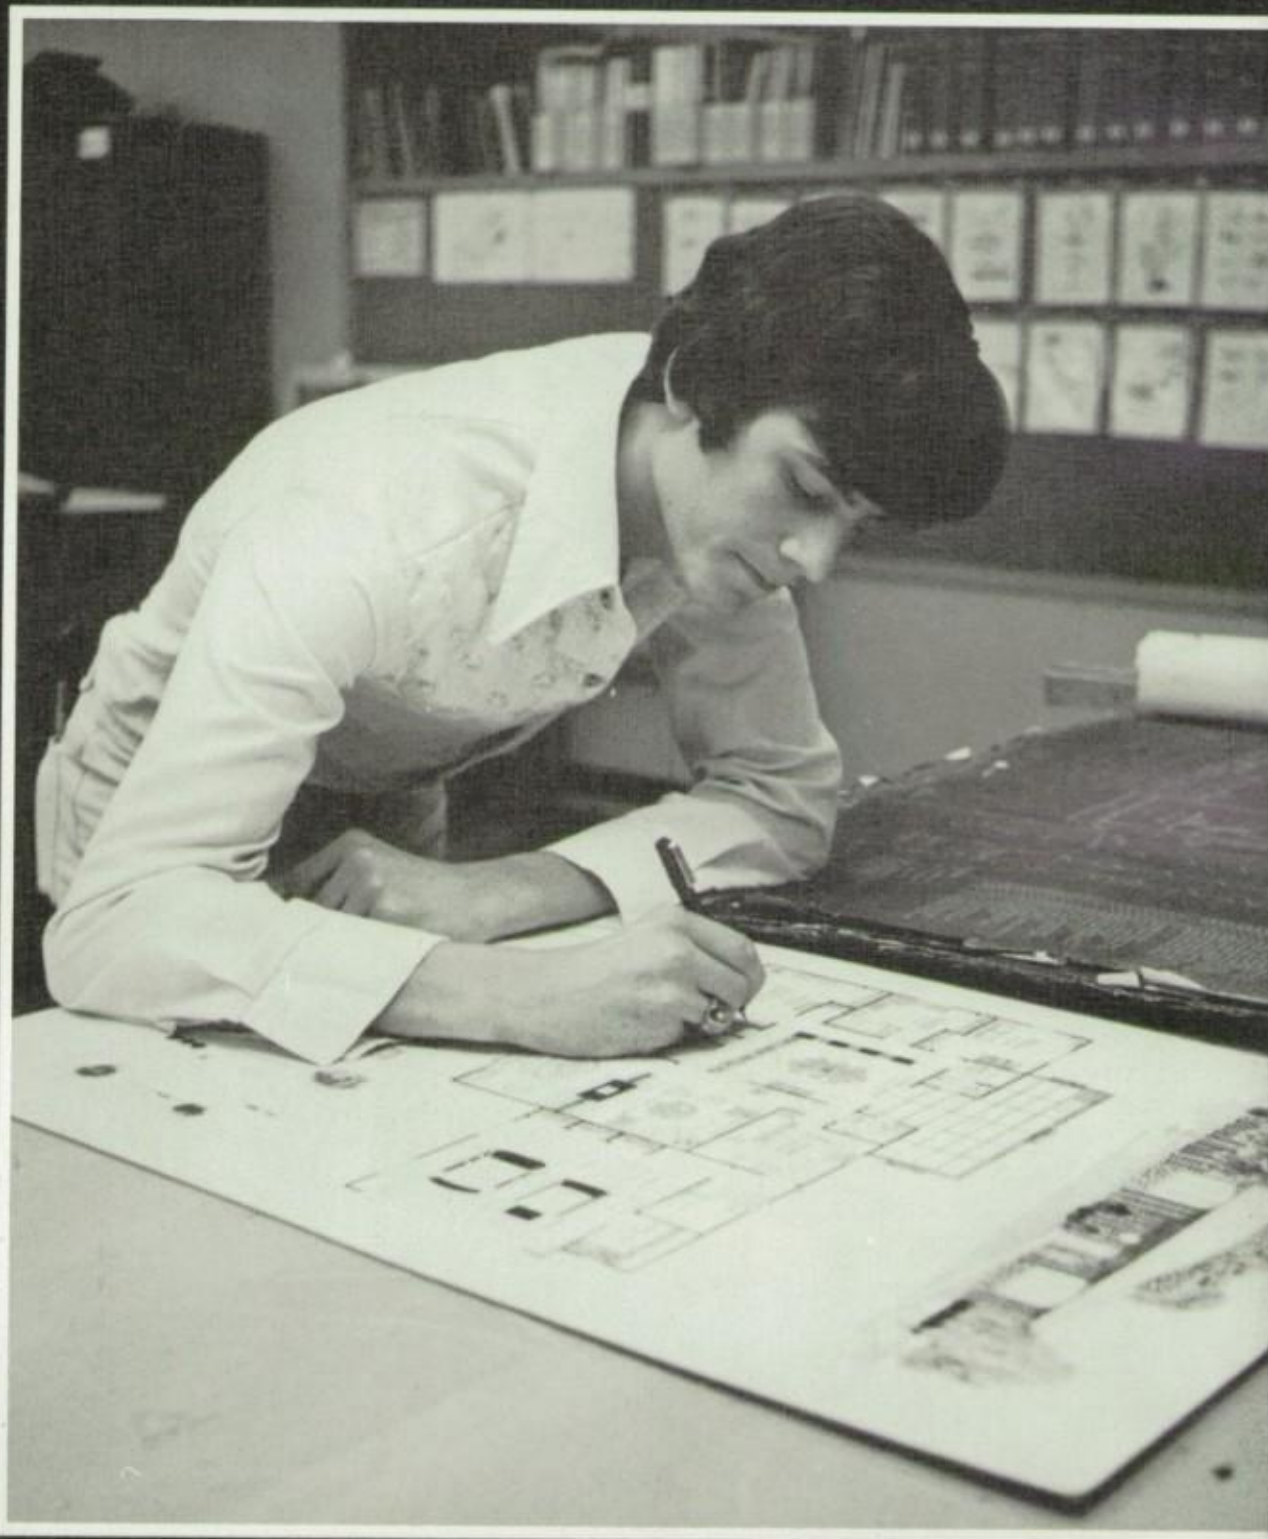

1) Fitting her pass key into a jammed lock, Locker Room Attendant Mary Regan assists two young patrons of the Berwyn Pool. 2) As the Christmas season approaches, Lynn Thurlwell helps out shoppers by wrapping their purchases. 3) Drawing customers into the store for its Cheese Festival, Larry Baker waves behind the counters at Swiss Colony. 4) Satisfied that his burger is done, Don O'Brycki prepares to garnish it for a waiting Wag's customer. 5) Sue Schnulle waits for an order at the Brookfield Zoo Restaurant.

Brains vs. Brawn

Honor societies provide academic incentive

"I think there is too much emphasis on sports and not enough emphasis on the student's scholastic achievements," judged Celeste Kroll. While Morton's extensive sports program flourished, individual excellence achieved through study seemed sorely neglected. The Senior Honor Society corrected this matter by extending membership to students earning a grade point average of 3.25 or above. Membership enabled students to list their participation in the honor society on college applications and thus increase their chances of acceptance. Senior Honor Society also sponsored a banquet commending outstanding scholars. The presentation of awards for outstanding junior boy and girl completed the evening. Not to be outdone, Junior Honor Society contributed its part toward recognizing the scholar. Members distributed honor scroll cards each semester to congratulate every student whose name appeared on the gold or silver honor rolls. The honor societies' focus on individual achievement sought to prove that strong individuals are the backbone of a healthy society.

1) With a strong knowledge of architecture, Andy Wierzbicki hopes to place in the IIT Drawing and Design Competition for talented drafting students. 2) PTO Parents' Night employs Senior Honor Society Guide Lisa Saran to direct visitors to classrooms. 3) At a fund-raising Junior Honor Society bake sale, Dori Mysicka, Katherine Lacina, and Carmella Avery aid a customer in choosing a delicacy.

Clubs honor athletic abilities by admission

"The thrill of victory, the agony of defeat" is a much-used but adequate summation of the experiences of Morton's many athletes. Although not required to participate, students took on the added practice, pressure, and endurance to make a name for themselves and for their school. This undertaking didn't go unrewarded, however, for many students earned awards plus respect from their teammates and friends because of their athletic abilities. One such distinction awarded to outstanding athletes was admission into the M-Club or Varsity Club.

M-Club members promoted athletic interest by sponsoring a 'ree night' consisting of an open pool and free-play basketball and volleyball. The annual M-Club versus faculty basketball game gave students the chance to root for their favorite players and teachers. Although the faculty trounced M-Club, all agreed it was a fun-filled game. The Girls' Varsity Club honored our gridmen by hosting a football banquet and also provided the baked goods at swim and basketball meets.

ART FARES

Of all the freedoms that people value, the freedom to express their artistic talents is perhaps one of the most precious. Artistic expression flourished at West as students danced, painted, sang, and acted throughout the year. The Physical Education Department provided an artistic outlet by making a modern dance course available to all interested students. In Fine Arts, jewelry and pottery classes topped the list of favorite courses taken by students who felt the need to express their feelings through the mediums of paint, metal, or clay. Another outlet for expression could be found in photography. Although many consider the photograph to be an artificial art form, students who had little aptitude for drawing produced startlingly beautiful effects through this expanding medium. In Language Arts Morton students found, in classes and after school productions, a medium of artistic expression. Participants memorized lines and fashioned costumes for such productions as Gentlemen Prefer Blondes and other dramatic works. For the students at Morton West, all their efforts made through art were advances toward the freedom which people will always hold dear.

1) Carefully filing a piece of metal, Kim Nepras uses her expertise to create an original piece of jewelry. 2) In a scene from Gentlemen Prefer Blondes, Steve Underwood dazzles his audience with a song and dance routine. 3) Examining a strip of negatives, Photographer Tim Capua searches for the shot which best captures his subject. 4) A special Shakespear-ean assembly utilizes classic drama to educate and to encourage self-expression. 5) In a show of versatility, Becky Kessel acts in Morton College's production of Godspell.

Thespians confront disaster

"Forensics gives students a chance to compete and learn about speaking," stated Jeff Kostel. Members of the forensics team found that there was more to speaking than "met the ear." Specializing in humorous and dramatic interpretation, interpretation of original material, and radio speaking, they performed alone and in groups. The forensics team competed in district, sectional, and state meets. Lisa Wolf commented, "The competition is great experience, and I love public speaking."

Thespians, the Theatre Department's "honor society," consisted of a group of exceptionally talented young performers who held leading roles in past productions. One of their most unusual performances was given during MacNeal Memorial Hospital's disaster drill. During the drill, an exercise in emergency procedures, thespians played the roles of seriously injured victims as emergency crews treated them.

The members of the Tech Guild, a dedicated group of people, stood behind the scenes at a number of school activities. Their purpose, as stated by Patty Johnson, was "to take care of all the technical aspects of theatre and to make sure we have quality in our craft." Besides backstage work for Gentlemen Prefer Blondes, Tech Guild provided lighting for assemblies, choral concerts, and other school functions.

Those blinding flashes that burst out at homecoming and other school activities came courtesy of the Photo Club. Members took pictures that were later displayed in downstairs D-hall and sold to the student body. The money raised by selling bits of "Circus Magic" and other memories went toward the development of better lab facilities.

"Egg shows that there is still talent left at Morton and that people are interested in reading literary works that are written by their classmates," said Jasmina Savic. At its annual banquet, the Egg honored writers and members who showed special effort during the year. Having already won the National Scholastic Press's All-American rating twice, the Egg staff felt confident in publishing its fourth edition.

An increase in membership prompted by the current dance craze made Modern Dance Club a more active organization. The club took trips to see famous dancers such as Dennis Wayne and Alvin Sley. "You feel better when you leave, like you've really accomplished something!" said Dancer Deanna Ceci.

1) Exercising to the beat of the music, Becky Kojs builds the flexible muscles required in modern dance. 2) Covering homecoming and other student activities to raise money for their club, John Esposito, Tony Lewandowski, Barry Kelpas, and Bill Thorpe capture the excitement of a pep assembly. 3) Using the filing system of the Egg, Mrs. Pat Geiser and Mary Vrechota organize submitted copy.

Led Zeppelin, Styx, Kiss, and many other well-known groups and recording artists like Barry Manilow and Billy Joel permeated the listening and even the dress of most students. For that matter, anything related to the music world intrigued almost everyone who tuned in a radio. For many music offered an escape from the pressures of home or school. The multitude of song titles and lyrics guaranteed a release that was suitable for the "macho man" or perhaps gave inspiration and courage to "King Tut" fans. Sometimes merely listening to the music was not enough; those with "disco fever" joined the crowds on the flashing floors to dance out the aggravations of the week. For the talented, simply listening to others produce music was not enough; they "banded" together to make their own. Guitarists, pianists, and even kazoo players joined ranks and played at parties, dances, and any other places that would indulge them. Others preferred to play solely for art in the privacy of their own homes. The luxury of losing themselves in music, whether it be Bach or rock, made even the most boring music lesson worthwhile. In spite of the varied tastes in artist or instrument, most agreed that without music it would be kind of quiet out there.

1) Since field practice goes on no matter what the weather may be, band members dress accordingly to combat nature's forces. 2) Parading up Home Avenue, the marching band heads for the homecoming football game. 3) Under the experienced direction of Mr. Robert Dvorak, orchestra musicians rehearse diligently for an upcoming concert. 4) Pounding out a steady beat, Scott Willett provides the percussive backbone essential to the Jazz Band's driving sound. 5) His face a reflection of the pensive mood of the piece he plays, Jon Yordy skillfully coaxes a mellow sound from his cello. 6) With Mr. Tom Fiala, Laura Brda gets into the swing of conducting a band.

Bands, orchestra make difference in MD

"I have been playing violin for seven years, and the music we play for concerts is really challenging," said Barbara Kapsa, an orchestra member. Music filled the minds of many Morton West students. The proof was a wide range of talented musicians performing in band and orchestra. MD, as the Music Department's patrons affectionately refer to it, consisted of a variety of performing units. The marching band paraded at homecoming and during football halftimes. The concert band consisted of top students selected according to their ability. Both West and East musicians participated in the district-wide orchestra. They performed in concert and in the pit orchestra for the fall musical Gentlemen Prefer Blondes.

A decade of winning floats

For the tenth year in a row, Music Club again came up with a first place float for the homecoming parade. Its circus calliope came into existence thanks to money raised by candy sales and the hard working efforts of Music Club's members. Some of the members also attended a Music Camp at North Central College in Naperville. For one week they practiced a staggering six hours a day. The result of their labor was a concert in which they performed their newly-mastered pieces.

The Aeolian, Freshman Mixed, and Dorian Choirs blended harmonious voices and sang in Christmas and spring concerts. The program consisted of numbers from the different groups and ended with a grand finale. While singing for the student body during assemblies, the choral groups actually rehearsed for their shows. These not only benefited the singers but turned into free shows for the student body. Belles and Beaus, consisting of about thirty members, sang in school concerts and also for civic groups and churches. Mr. James Chiado, director of Belles and Beaus, commented, "The group provides students with an opportunity to excel in singing a variety of music." Debbie Tymczuk readily agreed, "It gives us a chance to get together and work at doing it right."

1) Wielding the first place cup, Annalyn Chalabala and Cindy McDonald rejoice at Music Club's float victory. 2) After a performance at Clyde Savings, Belles and Beaus enjoy a refreshing treat. 3) In the earliest stage of creating their floats, Music Club members transform tissue paper into colorful flowers. 4) Contributing to the choral concert, Belles and Beaus chime with Christmas spirit.

Ecology Club revives endangered habitats

The limited environment of school, home, and work didn't stop students at West from learning more about their world. One club that students participated in to learn more about helping less fortunate people was the Medical Careers Club. The club functioned as a Red Cross Youth Club and worked for the betterment of human relations. Karen Rezek felt that the purpose of the club was to help other people. "It's a great feeling knowing that you're helping someone." Alicia Rabiega added, "We have fun and meet other people. Also we help people out and have fun doing it!" An example of one worthwhile project was the collecting and filling of Christmas stockings for the needy.

The study of nature was a main purpose of Ecology Club. Members in the club tried to preserve ecologically endangered areas such as the Wolf Road Prairie. Other activities included caring for the nature center, organizing paper drives, and visiting the Fullersburg Nature Preserve to observe the beautiful, fragile works of nature found there.

1) Cleaning the nature site with the Ecology Club shows Laura Bartik's belief in man's need to care for his environment. 2) Aided by Mrs. Louise Lavenau and Mrs. Evelyn Vocelka in constructing friendship boxes, Denise Kostka and Alicia Rabiega fulfill their duties as Red Cross Club members. 3) At Brookfield Zoo's viewing window, Alice Jezek and Bonnie Kovacic make friends with one of the most intelligent animals on earth, the dolphin.

Science Fiction zaps West

"Reading it fills in gaps of the mind, viewing it gives a sense of wonder, and discussing it sharpens the mind." That's how Dave Shepherd felt about science fiction, basis of the new Science Fiction Club. Since its beginnings last year the club took on a new adviser, Mr. Malcom Anderson. He organized trips to see Symphony of the Stars at Alpine Valley and a showing of the film 2001: A Space Odyssey.

Model U.N. also greeted two new advisers, Mr. Conrad Bujnowski and Mr. Jim Hennessy. Doreen Preber explained, "The purpose of Model U.N. is to be aware of what is happening in the world around you." Members experienced this at the Lake Geneva Conference, at which they strived to match their previous six best delegation awards.

The American Field Service returned this year as TALL, short for Travel and Learning Lands. In order to save money, exchange students sponsored by TALL who came from South and Central America stayed only half a year. This year TALL welcomed Monica Leal de Freitas of Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, to West.

1) Experiencing the sensation of being a gyroscope, Katherine Lacina glides across the floor. 2) Discussing plans for TALL activities, Doriann Mysicka, Lisa Tronchetti, Debbie Whitney and Sue Loess prepare for a social. 3) Readyng themselves for a trip to Lake Geneva, Wisconsin, Doreen Preber and Tom Zielinski practice debating techniques in a mock United Nations session.

Although many students at Morton West hardly remember the enormous amount of snow that fell in 1967, few will soon forget the snowstorm now referred to as the Great Blizzard of '79. What the National Weather Service innocently forecasted as 2 to 4 inches quickly piled into 20.3 inches between the days of January 12 and January 14. High winds and low temperatures accompanied these tons of snow to make snow removal extremely difficult. Needless to say, travel ranged from hazardous to impossible. To meet the travel difficulties Morton, giving students their first snow days off in years, closed the doors of both the East and West buildings. Hopefully listening to the radio for the magic number "201" became a nightly ritual for all, and for four days during the course of the blizzard, students and teachers breathed a sigh of relief that their journey through the Arctic wastelands had been cancelled. One bad effect the storm had on Morton was to disrupt final exam week. Since teachers usually review the previous semester's work the week before final exams, students missed out on very valuable lesson time, but many agreed that the vacation was well worth the inconvenience.

1) Wary of the slick, ice-covered pavements, Lisa Theodore slowly walks between huge piles of plowed snow. 2) With most sidewalks impassable, students trudge through an improvised pathway across West's front lawn. 3) Joining the school's sign in wishing students a "Season's Greeting," mounds of snow literally bury Morton West. 4) An earth science display case grimly gives a sign of the times: cold and snow. 5) With an epidemic of collapsed garages, Bill Chandler braves the heights to remove heavy, wet snow from his.

Students control the press

Through the TV, the car radio on the way to school, and periodicals used in school classes, the media permeated students' minds with its coverage of present day society. One of the most enduring forms of media is the newspaper. Here at Morton, students exercised control over the press by joining the Falcon newspaper staff. The Falcon has enjoyed many years of recognition for its articles. According to Mr. John Stebbins, adviser of the paper, "We're working to be the best we can be. We are the best we can be, yet we hope to be even better."

Other student publications included the Talon yearbook and the Egg, the student literary magazine. These attempts at understanding the media and its influence upon people was perhaps one of the greatest lessons experienced by students at West. Books, magazines, and newspapers were better understood by students who helped create some communication of their own.

West's points of view make TALON new

"Talon is funny. It's very good one year, and terrible the next." Normally a comment like that of Dave Slivinski would never make it to the pages of the yearbook, but this year the Talon did things differently. Armed with determination and the theme "Points of View," editors and staffers bombarded the school with questionnaires. "We tried to get as wide a range of opinions as possible," explained Kathy Peters. "That's the only way to get a realistic picture of the year." Student quotes appeared throughout the book, and many of the comments formed the basis for copy blocks.

Talon editors took an active part in yearbook workshops at Iowa State University, the University of Illinois, and the University of Wisconsin-Whitewater. Said Academics Editor Laurel Smith concerning the ISU workshop, "I learned how to pick interesting pictures and write about contemporary topics."

Among the honors awarded to the 1978 edition of the Talon were Columbia Scholastic's Medalist rating and first-in-class ratings from the Kettle Moraine Press.

1) Conferring on a layout planned for the book, Assistant Editor-in-Chief Gail Albers and Talon Adviser Mr. Robert Hegner make the necessary adjustments. 2) Assured that her layout is properly drawn, Student Life Editor Alice Jezek recopies it onto a triplicate form. 3) Taking a break at a workshop in Whitewater, Wisconsin, Gail Albers and Kathy Peters review the day's classes.

Sports

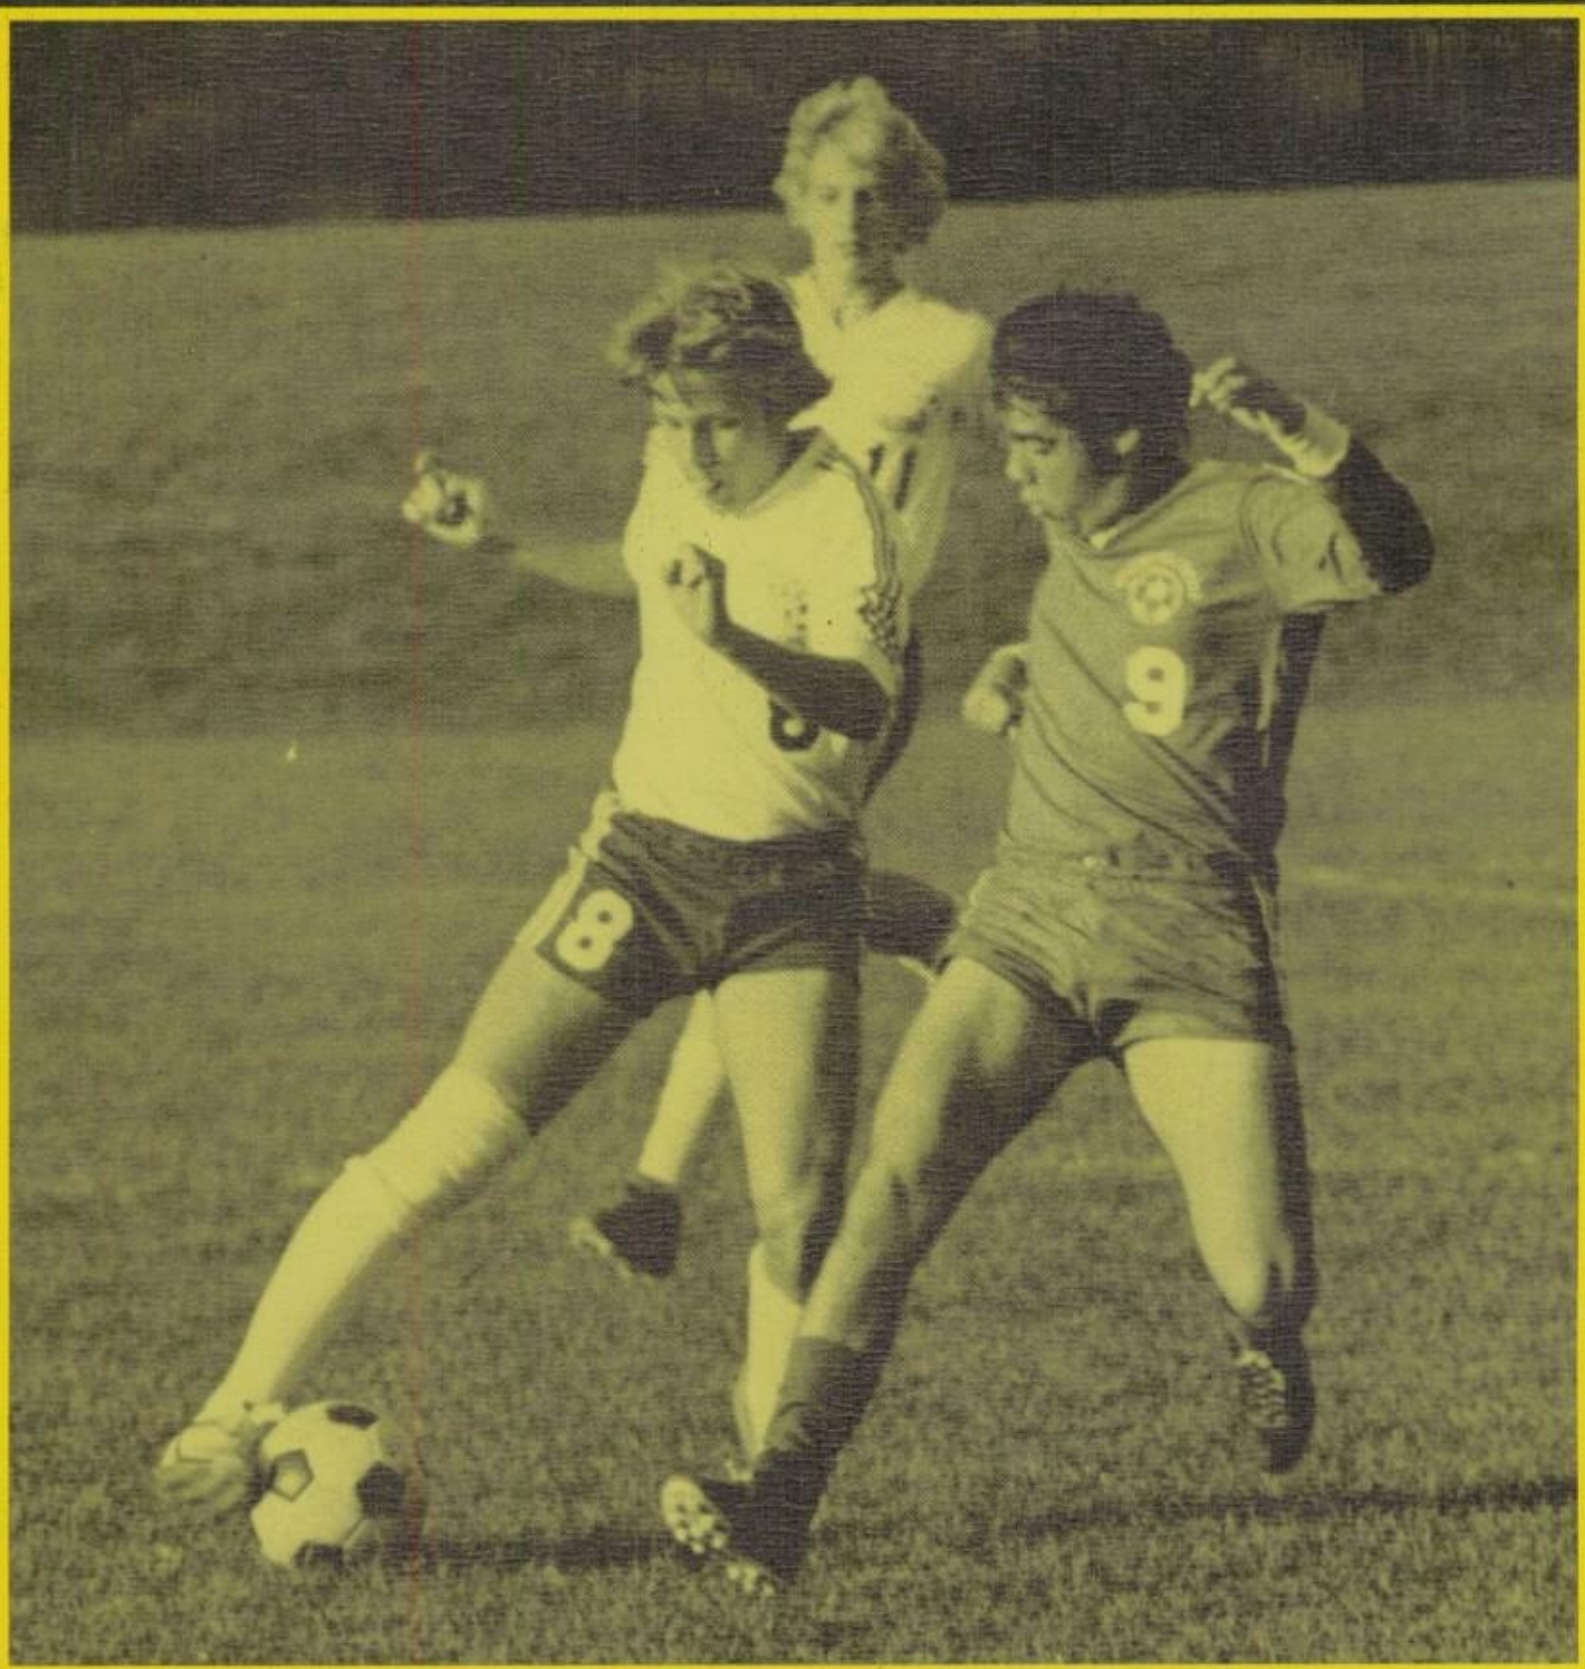

"Morton has a good sports program if you're the type that participates for fun and doesn't expect to win. Morton is not known for its outstanding teams."

"The conference was not that strong; and if we would have won our last two games, we would have tied for the conference championship," commented Coach Roger Hahn of the varsity baseball team. Except for a few returning players, the team was inexperienced. Scott Ward and Marty Schranz, the top players, made all-conference.

On the sophomore level many close games were won mainly because the team worked well under pressure. "They were able to hit when needed, and it was a team that would not give up," stated Coach Bob Kozurek.

The freshmen baseball team was very strong up the middle, but found trouble in the hitting department. Said Coach Jim Breck, "The team did well as freshmen and has great potential."

"The kids tried their best to make the whole school proud of them," stated Gerry Stiverson, coach of the varsity basketball team. In spite of the team's strong efforts, the season's outcome was a bit disappointing. Due to a lack of experienced players, many close games were literally thrown away. "We averaged sixteen turnovers per game," said Coach Stiverson.

Senior co-captains Dave Slivinski and Bill Ledvort led the varsity team; Slivinski was a strong rebounder and Ledvort, the team's leading scorer, received first honorable mention in all-conference balloting.

One other redeeming factor in the season was school spirit. Said Cager Brad Mataczynski, "The fans showed a lot of support, and that is what we needed to keep us going."

Inexperience, injuries hinder JV's season

Despite the losses of the first three games of the season, the varsity basketball team tied for fifth place with an overall record of seven wins and eleven losses. "The girls worked hard to attain their achieved goals," said Coach Terry Kulp. The team made the regional finals and then lost to Hinsdale South at the state tournament for the second year in a row.

Several workshops were offered to the team this year. The entire team competed in the Proviso East Summer League, and Laura Grisafe, Denise Dobuck, Sharon Cizek, and Sue Jansky attended the Indiana Hoosier Camp.

Besides the lack of experience on the dominantly freshman JV team, two main players, Sharon Cizek and Sue Jansky, were out part of the season with injuries. According to Coach Ruth Hapac, "The team had important qualities—good competition spirit and a sense of loyalty."

Varsity, JV bowlers roll a winning year

Although many of Morton West's sports teams found 1979 to be a year of frustrating defeats, the girls' bowling teams enjoyed victories. The varsity team ended their winning season with an overall record of ten wins and two losses. A highlight of the season was the Christmas tournament held in Dolton, Illinois, where the varsity team tied for eighth place. In district competition the team ended the season in a healthy second place. Connie Sims, the varsity bowler with the highest average, brought additional honors to the team by winning two medals, one for high series and another for high game. Sharon Kuras and Joyce Hodan, along with Captain Dee Dee Sunter, stood out in varsity performance.

The junior varsity team also bowled a great season with an overall record of eleven wins and only one loss. Top JV bowler Cathy Quinlan led her teammates with the highest bowling average.

"This year's cross-country team was better than the last several," remarked Coach Gordon Busse. Although the competition was strong, the varsity's past experience pulled them to fourth place. The team was very good in competition but had a few weak points. Said runner Jeff Klindera, "In cross-country you need to have team cooperation. In the past few years we would only have a few players to carry the team, but this year everybody worked together to form a good team." The two best runners were Tim Zielinski and Jeff Salach, followed by teammates Tom Wagner, Dave Klausler, Jeff Klindera, Pete Munoz, Frank Franz, and Mark Piotrowski.

On the frosh-soph level Coach Busse found that his runners were not serious enough about the sport to meet the rather strenuous practice requirements. "Hopefully by next year they will be more devoted to the team and their fellow team members," he said.

Drained of his last reserves of energy, Mike Stochl (right), propelled by sheer willpower, plods wearily across the finish line.

As he considers the long distance ahead, Ray Neapolitan (left) rounds a tree and paces himself through the dusk of late afternoon.

Well aware of the difference a fast start can make, the sophomore cross-country team (bottom) wastes no time in setting the pace.

At the season's start it appeared that 1978 would be torture for the varsity football team. Instead, they put out their best performance in almost a decade. "This was one of the hardest working teams ever," commented Varsity Coach Len Ruzycki. Although there were many victories, the most satisfying was their first win over East Leyden in over ten years. The coaches of the DPVL chose Rick Farnsworth as the league's outstanding player. Also, Larry Ketza set a Morton record when he returned a kick-off ninety-five yards for a touchdown.

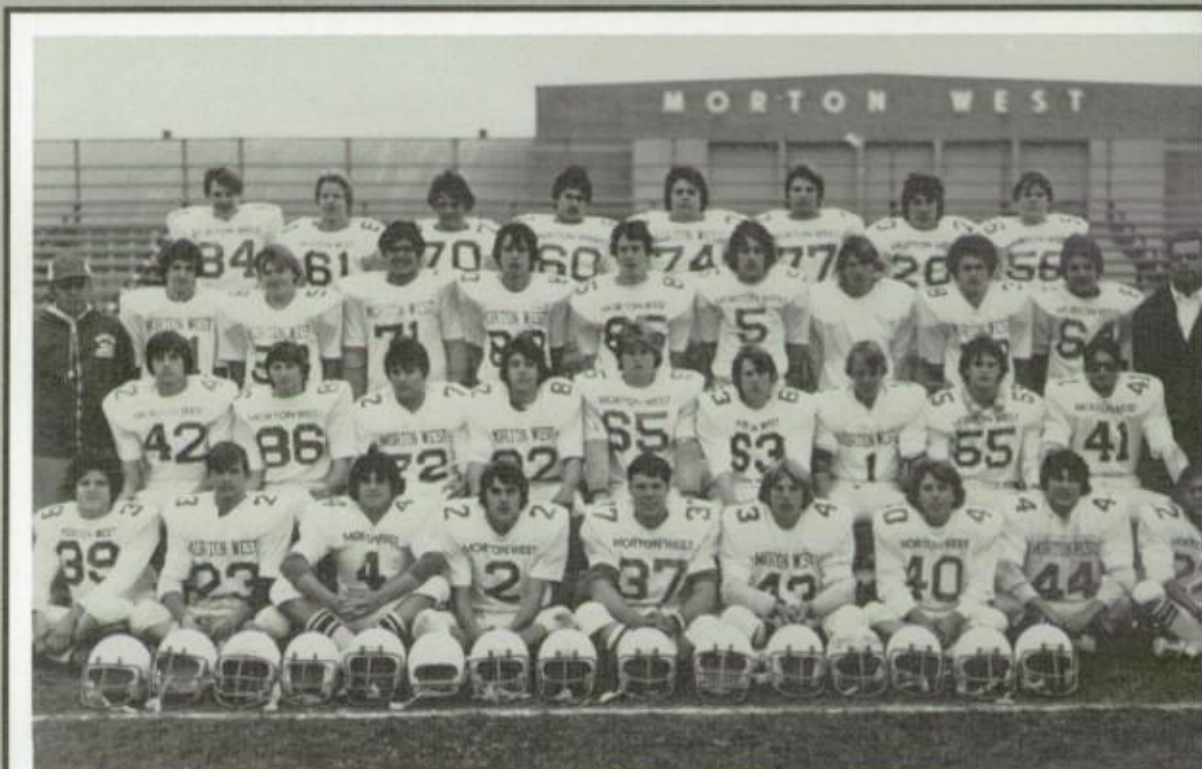

Coach Jim Evan was proud of the progress the sophomore football team made. Player Darren Hillock stated, "I think our team practiced very well and seemed pretty dedicated." "The team worked real hard," commented Coach Earl McMahon of the freshman team. "They were fine quality kids. They just needed the experience."

Despite its erratic performance, this year's varsity golf team gained valuable experience. Coach Don Matheny stated, "The boys were inexperienced as a team. They had the potential but didn't use it." Golfer Mike Finn agreed, "The team didn't perform to its fullest ability this year. With six starters returning the team should peak next year." Joe Cernik and John Kunkel placed second and sixth respectively out of fifty-four golfers in the league meet. Gary Janda placed sixth out of seventy-eight in the district.

Having had no previous experience as a team, the frosh-soph golfers found that they faced problems similar to the varsity's. Most of the underclassmen golfed an average game but hoped for a better season next year as they become accustomed to DesPlaines Valley League competition.

Soccer players small in size, experience

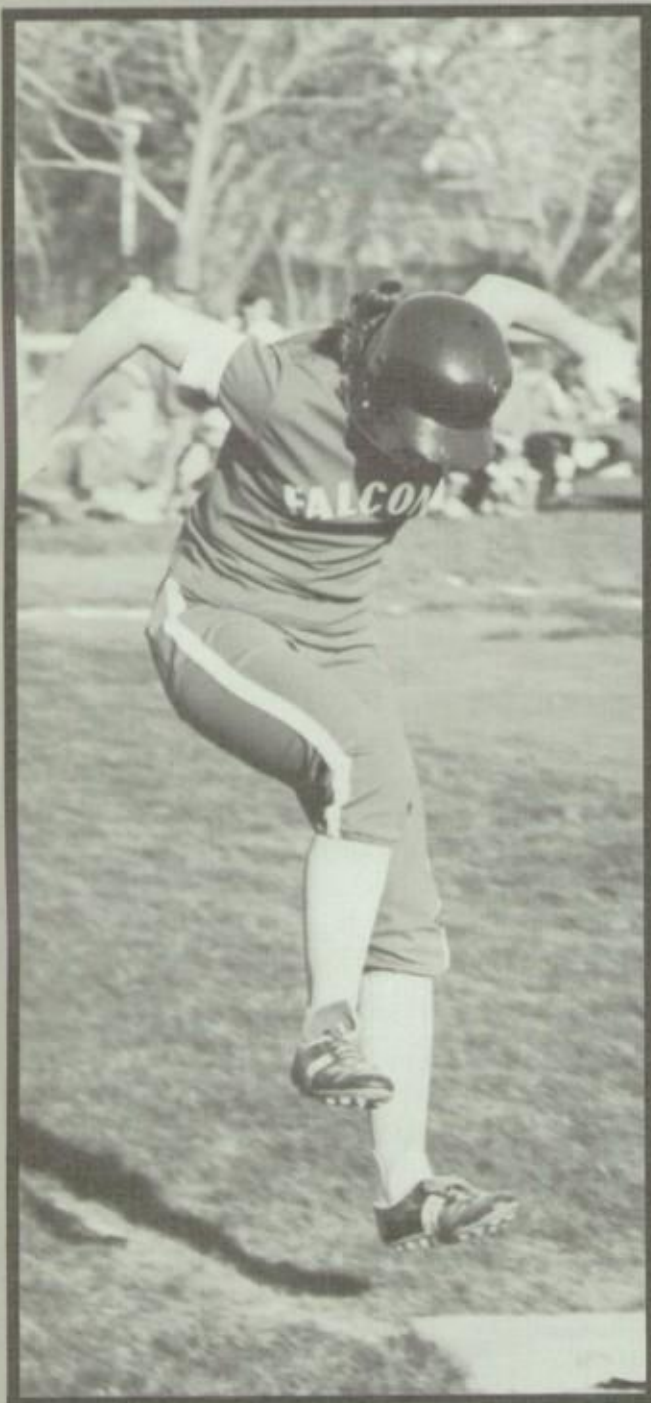

For the varsity soccer team, 1978 was a year for developing and refining skills. Although most of the players had experience in the sport prior to high school, the varsity team as a whole was young and unaccustomed to league competition. Besides their inexperience, the players were relatively small in size compared to those of other teams. These combined weak points accounted for a rather disappointing season record of eleven wins, seven losses, and two ties. Coach Bill Stamper commented, "Because of a lack of maturity on the team we did not have that killer instinct to finish off a team after we had them on the ground." Fans of the soccer team were let down by its performance also. "I was so disappointed when the soccer team didn't go downstate," said JoAnn Marciszewski. "The last four years West has had such a great soccer team that I wished they could have progressed farther in the finals."

The soccer season was not without highlights. Big wins included the games against Morton East, Wheaton-Warrenville, Addison Trail, and Quigley South. Outstanding individual performances came from all-conference players, Rich Liska and Mike Swade. Another all-conference player, Lou Josek, was also named all-sectional and most valuable player. Team Member Gerry Gomez added his name to the record books by committing 56 fouls in one season and thus bettering the previous record held by Morton West graduate Joe Svec.

"The entire team worked together," said Karen Conti, a member of the junior varsity softball team. "This, along with Coach Jerry Stiverson's discipline and knowledge of the game brought out the talent in all of us." This talent rewarded the varsity team with second place in the conference and the junior varsity with first.

One of the main strengths of both softball teams was pitching, in which Sue Jansky and Jessica Hoggard of the varsity team and Jamie Sabbach and Marsha Hoggard of the junior varsity team excelled. Linda Sedivy paced the varsity team with an excellent batting average of .521. Sedivy, co-captain of the team with Leona Tranauskas, also made the all-conference team for the second year in a row.

The varsity team nominated Sharon Cizek and Marla Vesley as the most valuable players and Laura Grisafe as the most improved. The junior varsity team nominated Mary Stacho as the most valuable player and Sharon Nelson as the most improved.

Kammerer makes third best time in history

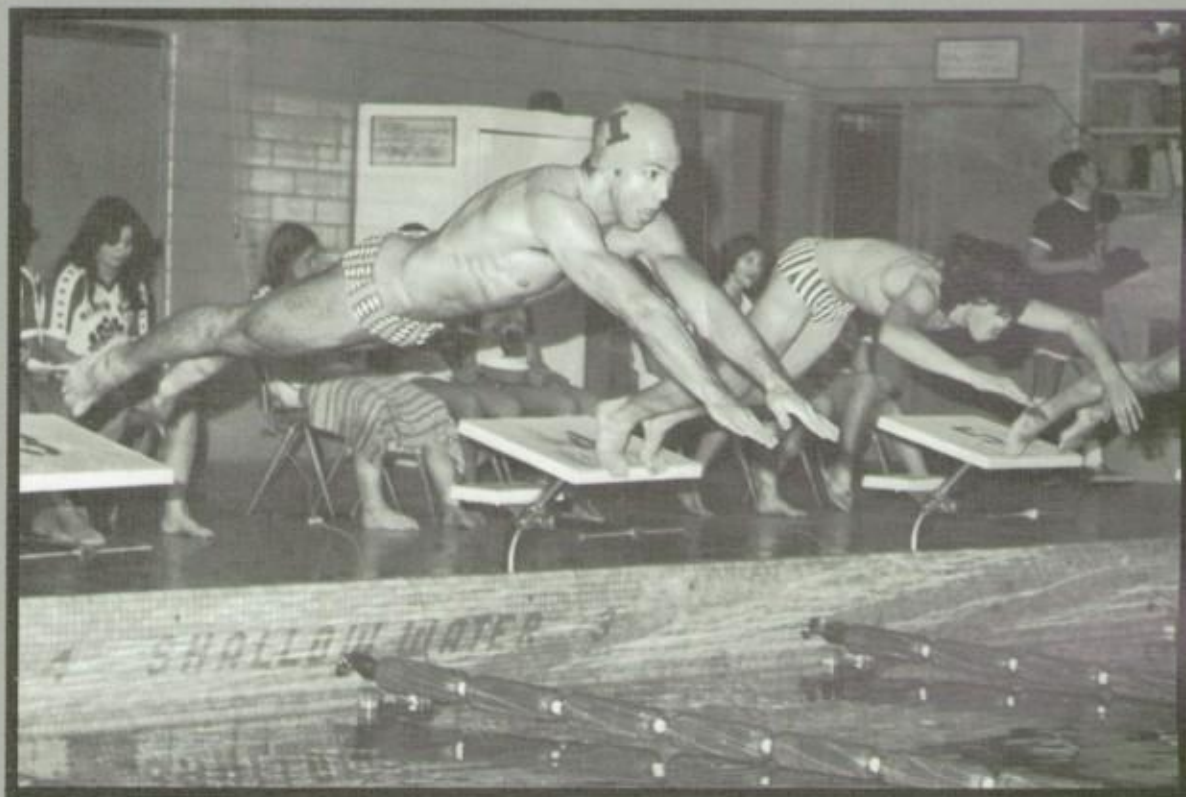

Although the 1978 varsity swim team was not as outstanding as some of the many teams Jim Ellinger has coached, he felt they did a good job. Two of the year's best swimmers, Lou Kammerer and Dan Kalina, graduated with outstanding scholarships.

Kammerer ended up the season as an all-American in the 50 and 100 yard freestyle event. He has made all-state for three years in a row, and his latest time in the freestyle event was the third best in the history of the meet. Joe Albanese, the first West freshman swimmer ever to qualify in a state meet, also qualified as a sophomore for the state 100 yard freestyle event. Commented Coach Ellinger on the '78 swim team, "Mr. Will and I were very impressed with the improvement and hard work of the team."

Under the coaching of Mr. Earl McMahon, the freshman team finished their season in first place. The sophomore team did not do as well, mainly due to low team membership. Coach McMahon remarked, "Both levels did a good job, I only wish more people would come out for the sport." The lack of people willing to try out for the sport could be due to its physical difficulty, but those who tried found it is not without reward. Said Junior Swimmer Gary Firtik, "Swimming is a real hard sport, but you use every muscle in your body and that's good."

Braced for the shock of the chilly water beneath him, Lou Kammerer (above, right) explodes from the starting platform.

Pacing himself for the remaining laps of his race, Dave Shubinski (right) uses a smooth, steady stroke to conserve his strength.

Although many of its members were young, the girls' swim team splashed to a great year. "I didn't expect the season to turn out as well as it did. The team far exceeded my early expectations, and I am thoroughly surprised with their accomplishments," commented Girls' Swimming Coach Jim Will. These accomplishments included nineteen broken records in ten different events. Gail Rawers, an outstanding varsity swimmer, broke six school records. Jean Hajer, Karen Krev, Nancy Granitz, and Lynn Benes broke the school's 200 medley relay record while Rawers, Benes, Hajer, and Gail Ljungberg broke the 400 freestyle record.

Sophomore Donna Felsecker broke a record in diving and also qualified for state competition. Two freshman, Donna Plucienik and Leslie Larson, competed on the varsity level. The excellent performance of the team as a whole resulted in a second place in dual meet competition and a third place in the league standings.

Small numbers in turnout and win column

Although this was one of the poorest league finishes Coach Bob Hegner's varsity tennis team ever had, they ended up with a nearly respectable 5 win and 8 loss record. A middle-of-the-league team by right, Morton West took eighth place out of nine teams. The fact that the season was shorter than the previous year but with the same amount of games hampered the team's progress because two starters, the Wojciechowski brothers, ran into illness about mid-season. Commented Coach Hegner, "We had a lot of misfortunes and bad breaks. If the law of averages works, next year we should be in good shape." Two of the happier events of the season were the 3-2 win over arch-rival Morton East and the winning performance of Freshman Jim Giannis. Playing at second and third singles on the varsity, Jim won two-thirds of his matches. Stated Netman Roman Wojciechowski, "There was a lot of good team effort; and if we want to win in the years to come, we need to have team effort."

The major factor hindering the frosh-soph tennis teams was a poor turnout of players. About one fifth as many players came out as did for last season's teams. Instead of the usual two underclass teams consisting of fourteen players, there were only six boys to face separate freshman and sophomore teams. All freshman and some sophomore matches were forfeited.

Confronted with a wide serve from his opponent, Jim Campagna (above, left) uses a backhand to send the ball cross-court.

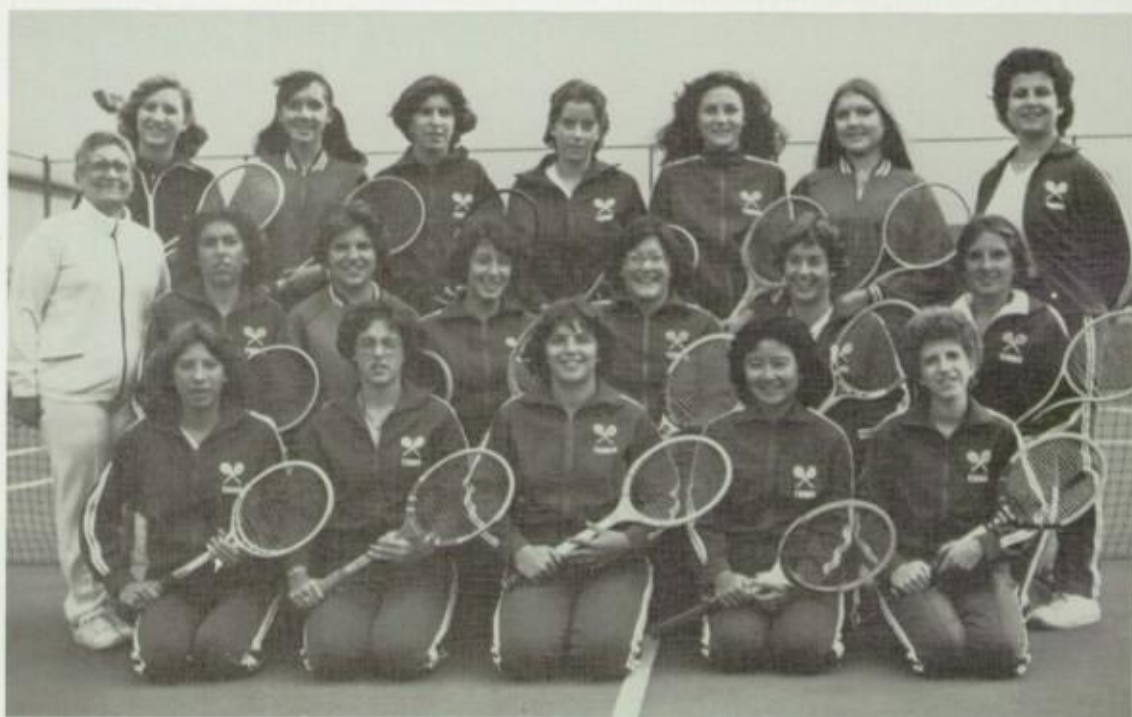

In a DPVL match Jim Giannis (left) tightens his arm and prepares a forehand return as his eyes follow the ball to his racket strings.

"The girls were experienced, and they knew what they were doing," said Manager Mary Vrchota of the varsity and junior varsity girls' tennis teams. Varsity Coach Ruby Hammack's girls showed their know-how by wrapping up the season in third place and an overall nine and two record.

Joan Mahon-Finder played first singles for the varsity team and achieved a perfect record by never losing a match. She won district competition and completed an outstanding season by going downstate. Lily Majdak and Joanne Giannis, a doubles team, also competed downstate while the varsity's first doubles team, Joyce Nelson and Michelle Fonte, performed well at home in the regular season.

The junior varsity team ended their season in sixth place and scored a total five wins and six losses. Liz Wiet stood out in junior varsity competition with an excellent six and two record.

There was heavy competition this year in the league, but the varsity track team ended the season in a healthy fourth place. "The team was strong in the sprints and field events, but was weak in distance," remarked Coach Gordon Busse. Special achievers were Steve Piha, who qualified for state finals; Chris Klausler, the team's most valuable player; and Ken Visk, most improved member of the team. Although the '78 track team was above average, next year's team shows even more promise as a district leader. Since the team primarily consisted of juniors, most of the best runners plan to return for another season.

The frosh-soph team did well in competition. They learned what the meaning of teamwork was and liked it. Commented team member Jim Pieruccini, "We all worked hard, but to be a team you all have to help out." The track team showed a good capability for winning in the years to come.

Varsity volleyball suffers last place finish

Although the varsity volleyball team ended the year in last place, the team did have one highlight, winning second place in the Proviso East Tournament. Coach Bill Buchinger commented that he was very disappointed with the team's season. "Although the girls came a long way since the beginning of the season, they were still making errors and giving away games that they shouldn't have."

A senior on the varsity team, Denise Dobuck, displayed quality and spirit throughout the season. Juniors Sue Jansky and Jill Lewandowski, stars of the junior varsity team, also assisted the varsity in several games.

The JV team ended their season with a six and two record. Coach Judy Nemec said, "The team was well balanced, and could usually handle anything." Rita Cybulski, Linda Hauptman, Denise Morrell, Sheila Mohan, and Beth Lacey led the JV's.

Sophomore wrestlers grapple with apathy

A lack of student participation can hamper any sport, and in 1979 it seemed that wrestling was one of the sports hardest hit. On the sophomore level turnout was so low that several weight levels had to be forfeited because there were no grapplers to fill them. The varsity team suffered not only from apathy but also from inexperience. "Our team worked hard, but a lot of other teams had age and size on us," explained Matman Don Stevens. Coach Don Matheny was nonetheless pleased with the performance his group gave. "Many of the wrestlers did well for their first year on the varsity team," he commented. Top achievers for the Falcons were Varsity Captain Steve Pacentine, who placed first in the district and was a sectional qualifier, and Greg Blazek, a Des Plaines Valley all conference wrestler, with a perfect record of eight wins and no losses in the 98 pound class.

"I will probably use the experience I've had with people more than anything I've learned in school classes."

Lori Brown

"If I wasn't in school today, I'd be working; but where else can you learn just about anything for nothing?"

John Wade

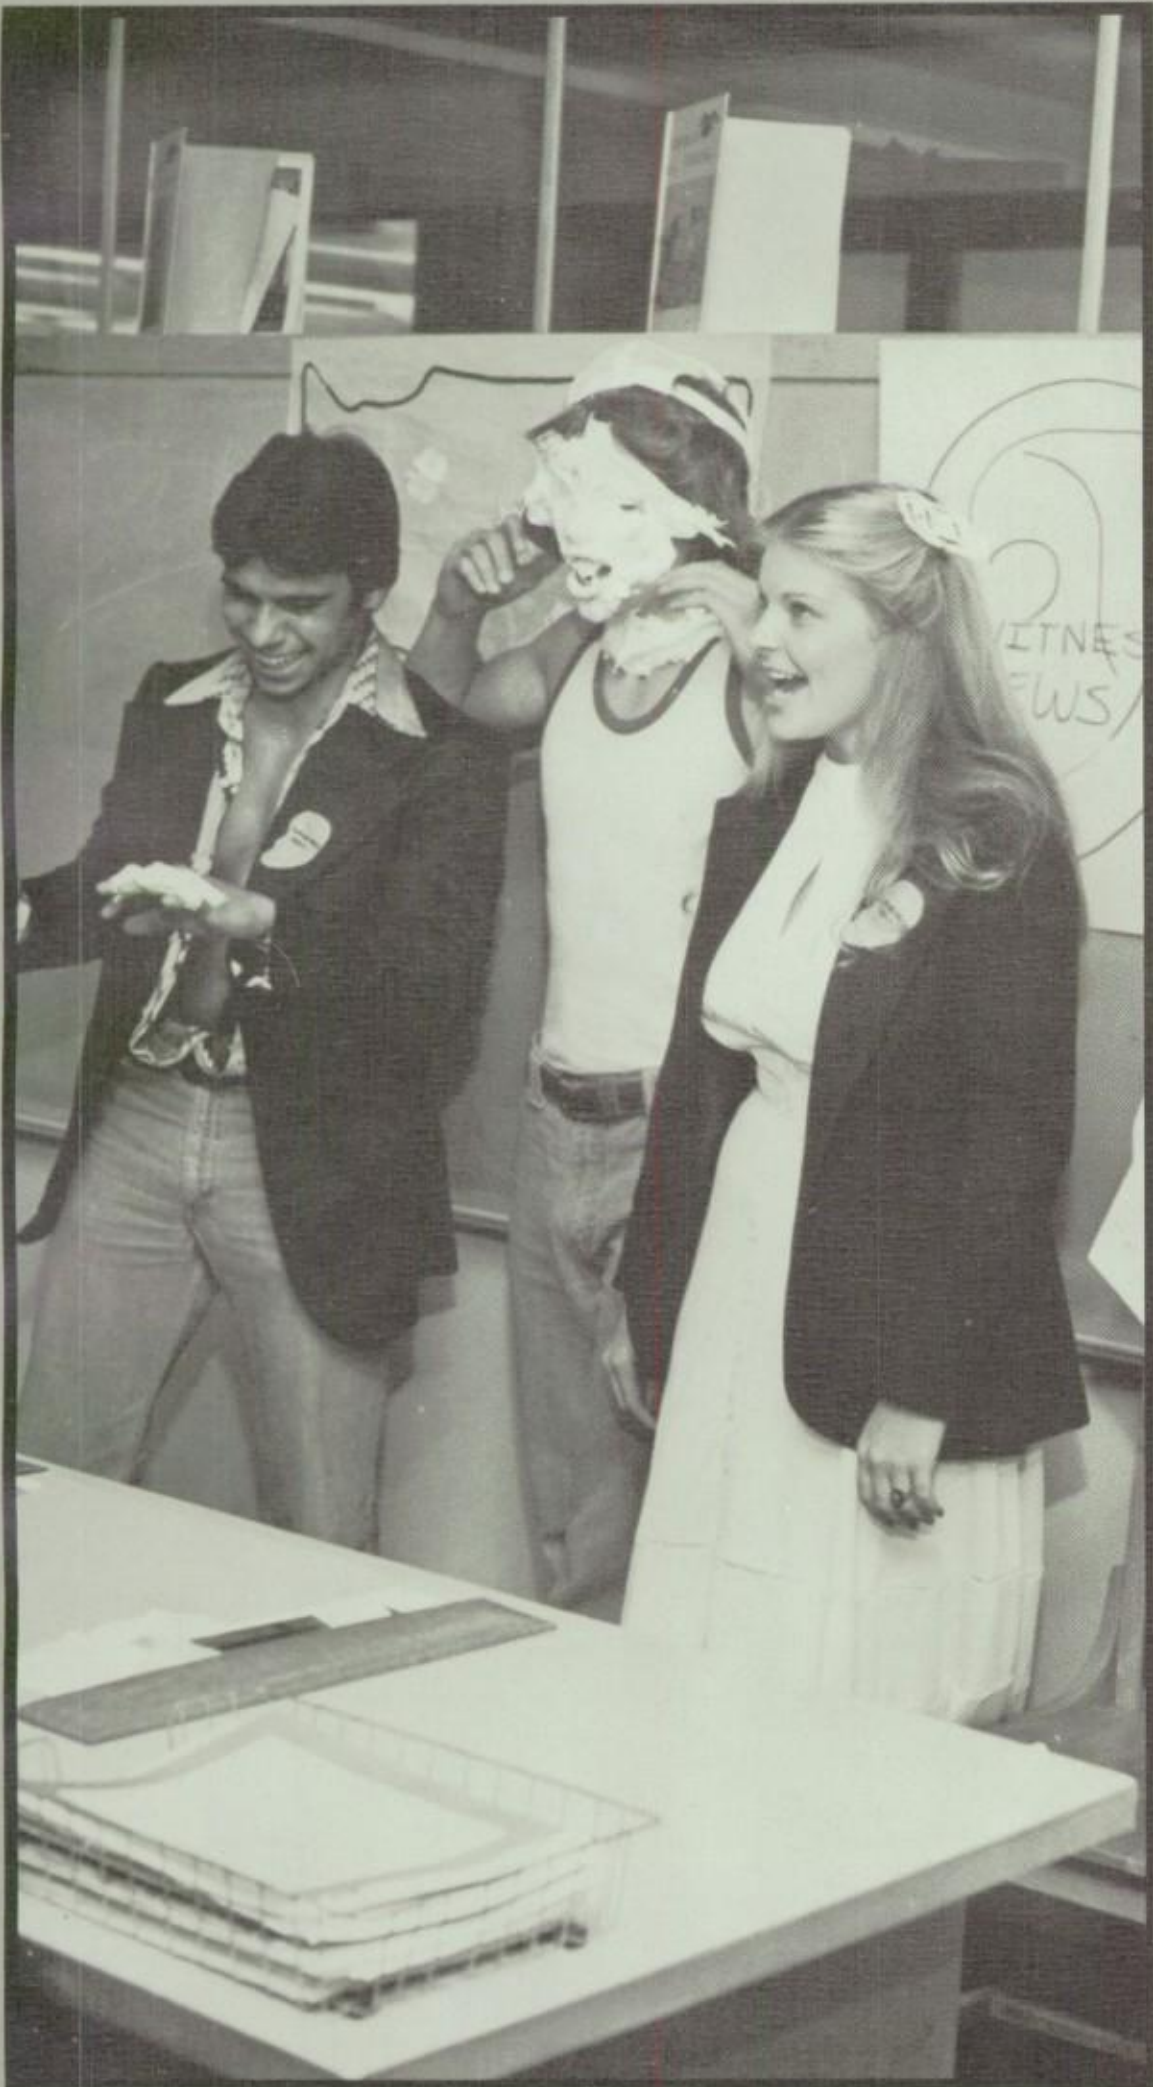

This year the efforts of the Morton West English Department centered around the improvement of the freshman courses. Morton English teachers talked with the English teachers from the feeder grade schools in a series of meetings. These sessions attempted to coordinate the two English programs to provide a student with a smoother transition from grade school to high school English. Most of the freshman English classes this year participated in a program that stressed writing which the department felt needed more emphasis in high school classes.

Students selected classes from several areas of English. Television, film, and theatre arts classes offered many opportunities. Said Liz Oplatka about her theatre arts class, "The classes are on a far more personal level than most other classes in the school." Students also chose from a number of classes dealing with various types of literature. "English lit is my favorite class," commented Joanne Marciszewski. "We dwell on each essay, novel, or play just long enough to get a better understanding of each piece of writing."

1) Another member of the class captures the action on film as Bill Ciesieleczyk, Mr. James Anderson, and Mike Lautermilch debate today's youth in a TV class's studio set up. 2) Listening to classmates reading aloud, students follow along in Of Mice and Men, one of the plays covered in theatre arts. 3) A pie in the face proves to be a unique way to learn new words as Jim Campagna and Sue Zurawski show a friend in a sketch for vocabulary class. 4) Like many freshmen Lisa Schiechal finds that the new text Stack the Deck provides an interesting approach to writing. 5) Theater Arts Student Claudia Dudek refines her acting abilities as she feigns agony to assist fireman during a disaster drill.

Following the trend of recent years, enrollment continued to decline in the foreign languages at Morton West. Third and fourth year students combined in order to form advanced classes; in fact, the advanced German class consisted of only two boys who met daily for independent study. Members of the Language Arts Department felt that part of the reason for low enrollment was that many students looked for classes with the least amount of work. Mr. William Ritis said, "Everyone's searching for the easy way out." Because of the extra effort put in by the advanced foreign language students, school officials considered giving weighted grades to those enrolled in third and fourth year classes. Although taking a foreign language involved extra work many students found it worthwhile. "It'll be helpful because you can get a good job if you are bilingual," stated Irene Espinosa. "I intend to go into some phase of the business field, and with this training, I can participate in it on an international scale," explained Diane Marciszewski. "It's been hard sometimes, but it's lived up to my expectations. I really enjoy it."

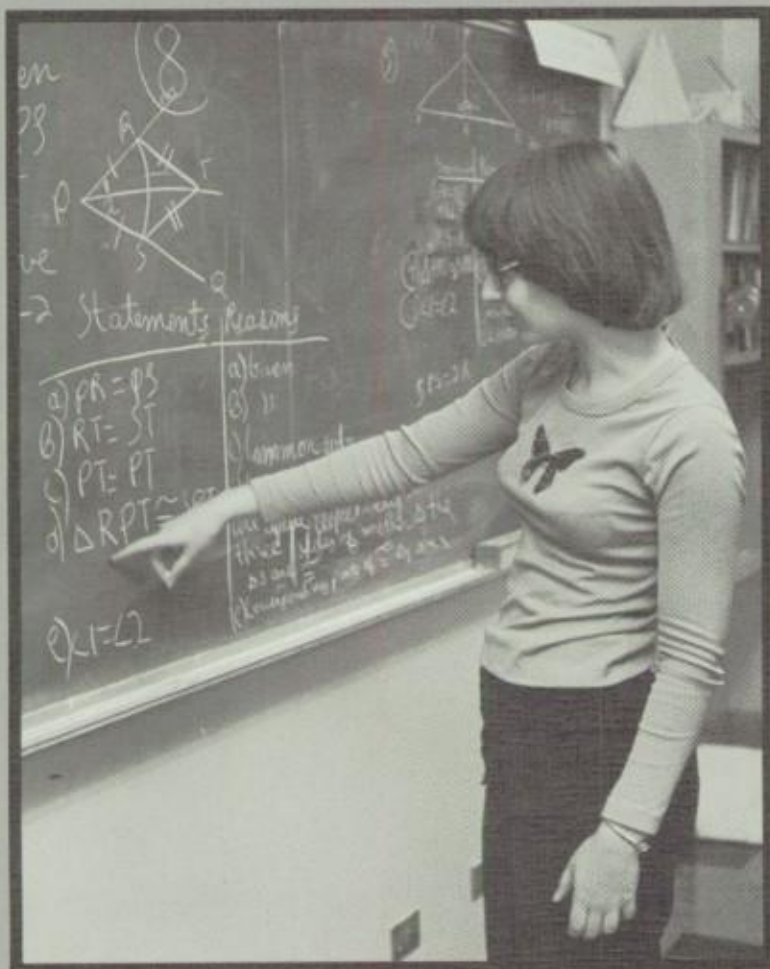

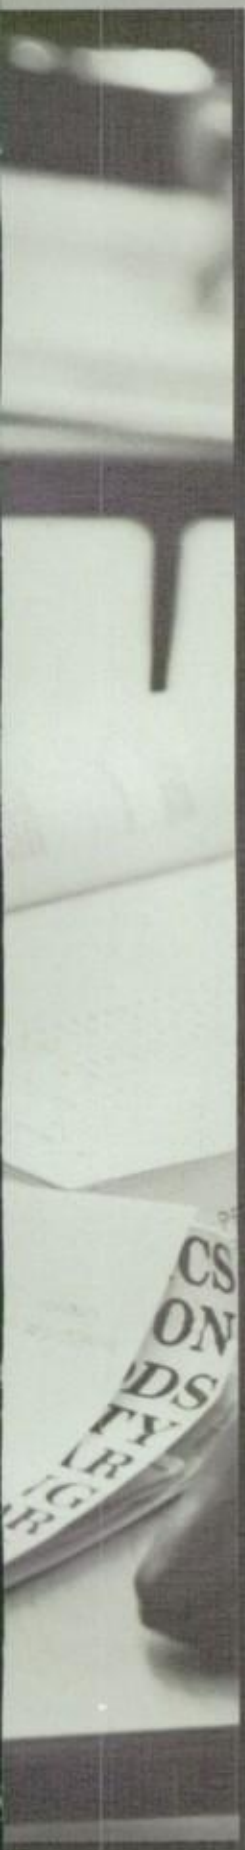

1) Puzzled by a question, Judy DeStefano checks to make sure that she comprehends the French essay which she just read. 2) In the quiet of the library, advanced German Students Kyle Michard and Jeff Stvan work on translating a short story. 3) At the front of the room, Angela Donofrio, Angela Comella, and Mark Cione display some aspects of Italian culture so that the class will better understand Italy and its people. 4) Outfitted in a sombrero, Don Riedl, assisted by Sandy Karvanek, explains the use of paper piñatas to interested classmate Lillian Obusina.

Finally implementing this year an idea that they had long discussed, school officials required students to take one unit of math for graduation. However many students had already chosen math in preparation for the future. For those interested in working with computers, computer math became a one semester major. Students pursuing the basics had a choice of several courses, including basic math, computational skills, and pre-algebra. Those intent upon more difficult courses could take classes ranging from geometry to calculus. Katherine Lacina explained why she enrolled in her college algebra class. "I like this course because it is a challenge, and I like to solve problems. Also, algebra is an important part of metallurgy which I am planning to go into." Whether they planned for a specific career or just needed to prepare for college, students in all levels of math found it an important step in planning for the future. "I enrolled to prepare myself for college," commented Mark Piotrowski. "It helps me to learn things I might not have known."

1) Getting a head start on the day's homework, Jolene Romak begins to complete her math assignment in the closing minutes of class. 2) To help the rest of her class understand a geometry problem, Maria Kanavos explains the steps that she used to develop her proof at the board. 3) Laboring in her statistics class, Lynn Argianias discovers that a pocket calculator can come in handy when searching for the answer to a tricky problem. 4) Intent upon removing any flaws from his data, Jim Bergthold plans a program to run on Morton West's computer. 5) As Mr. Oran Myers explains the complexities of a puzzling calculus problem, Lim Chin carefully listens to understand better the procedures.

Greenhouse management, a new course, began this year as a sequel to last year's horticulture class. The new course stressed money management and the techniques involved in making enough profit to start the next year's crops. Both last year's and this year's courses received favorable reactions from the students. "I really like horticulture because I feel this could be the start of a good career for me," remarked Mary Stosur. Tom Kadolf, enrolled in greenhouse management, commented, "The class is very practical, more practical than any other class in Morton. In the greenhouse we do work that we will be doing when we work at a commercial greenhouse." Biology, physics, and chemistry were also offered through the Science Department, as well as advanced courses in biology and chemistry and a course in earth science. "The class is challenging," explained Lori Marczak about advanced chemistry, "but not totally out of reach." Students in all areas explored the principles of science in order to help them understand and relate to our rapidly changing world.

1) Part of the fun of Halloween for Jaymie Malarik is using her bare hands to scoop out the innards of her smiling pumpkin in horticulture class. 2) Safely protected in a pair of goggles, Jim Patula sprays some plants in the greenhouse. 3) Before beginning their experiment, Bob Klump weighs the vile using metric weights while Jane Stacho keeps an accurate record. 4) As she carefully adjusts the flame, Lori Alshouse studies the reaction of the substance in her crucible for a chemistry experiment. 5) Before striking the ball suspended from the physics room's ceiling, Don Larson pauses a moment to set his aim and secure his grip on the racket in an experiment to picture a flattened tennis ball.

Greenhouse courses blossom with popularity

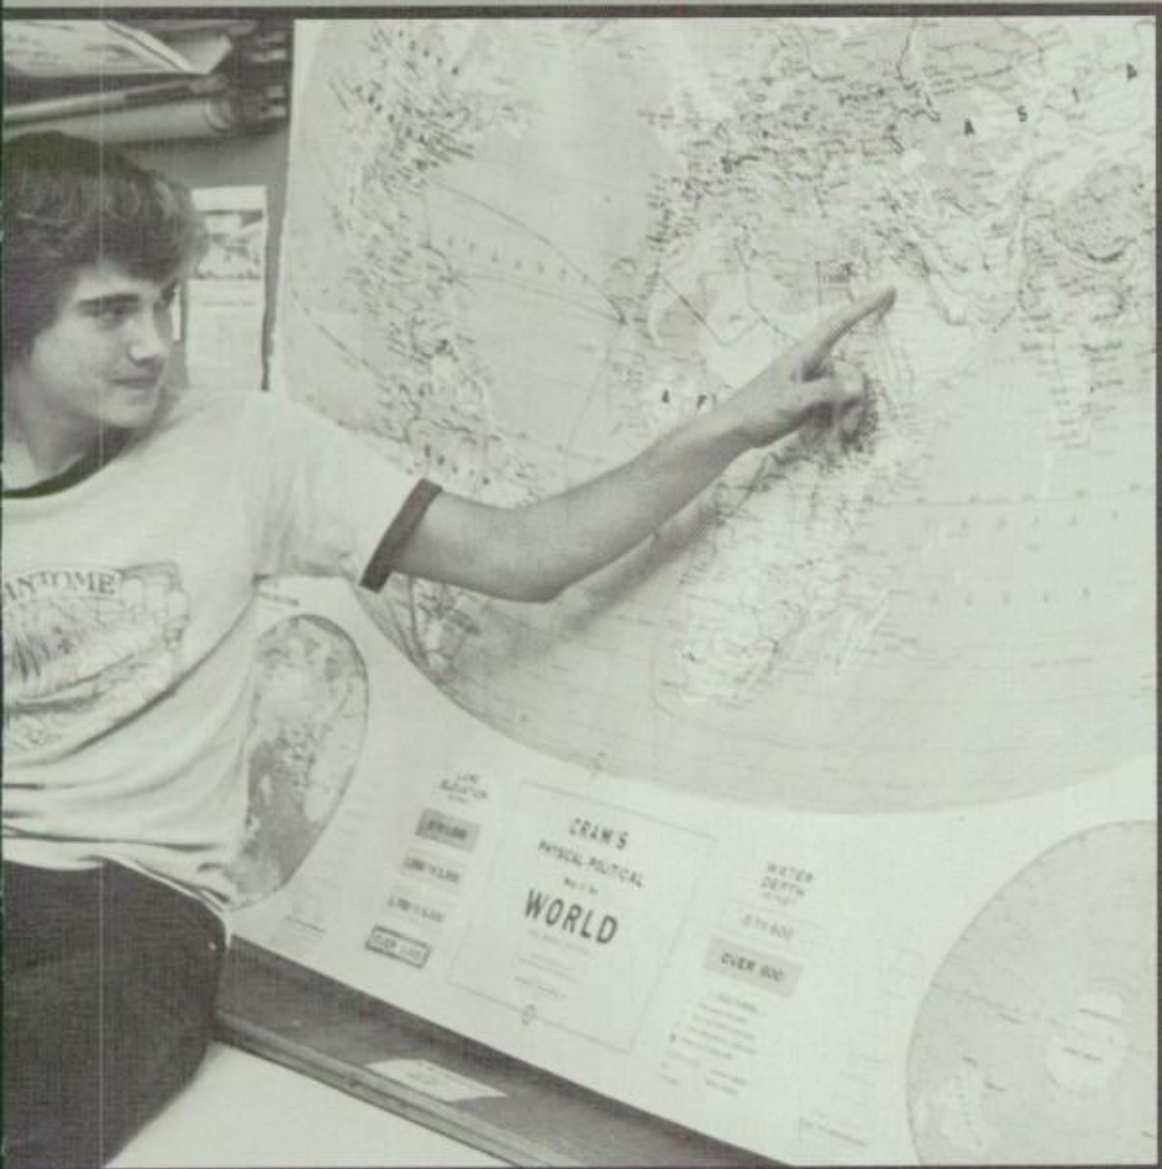

Youth and the law reads students their rights

Iffered this year in the Social Science Division was youth and the law, a new course. The course explained to students their responsibilities and rights under the law and therefore helped them participate in our confusing society. "It helps me to understand a lot of different things about the law," said Jerry Conoboy. "I plan on getting into law enforcement and this gives me a good idea what it will be like." Donald Vana commented, "I wanted to find out what my rights were as a minor. Now, I know more about my rights, and I know to have a lawyer when buying a house or going to court." Students counted on their new knowledge of the law to assist them in many ways in the future. "When I happen to run into trouble," added Donna Polakowski, "I'll know what they're talking about." Also new this year was an advanced placement European history course designed to replace a similar course dropped three years ago. Other classes available in the Social Science Division included world history, American history, psychology, economics, and current events.

1) As an example of the period's culture, Karen Conti and Janelle O'Brien perform a piece of Baroque music for a European history class. 2) To help in their understanding of the complexities of today's society, a panel of students vehemently debate the pros and cons of legalized prostitution. 3) While in the library, Allen Balk researches information for his American history class by using a source index. 4) For a class project that attempts to point out the need of cooperation, Sue Stastny and Diane Spolar endeavor to untangle themselves by stepping over Dave Sheperd's hand. 5) In answer to Sue Pajonk's question, James Masden locates the major cities of the Middle East on a large classroom map.

Art students at all levels expanded their talents and individuality as they discovered new concepts in art. Beginning students enrolled in basic art gained knowledge in the many mediums offered through the department. Areas explored included sketching, woodcutting, and lettering. Those who continued beyond basic art enrolled in more advanced classes in pottery, painting, jewelry, and sculpture. "The main reason I enrolled in a second year of art, painting, is because I really enjoy drawing or expressing myself through art," remarked Theresa Wierzbicki. Margaret Heffernan commented, "We just finished modern art portraits which was fun. We got to use greens, blues, and purples in a person's face." Fiber arts, although offered for several years, enrolled students for the first time this year. "My favorite class is fiber arts," explained Debbie Whitney, "because it involves working with many different kinds of materials to create unique pieces of art." With the exception of printmaking, which was dropped this year, the art curriculum remained the same. The program succeeded with flying colors in drawing the student's varied creative interests.

1) In the early stages of creating an original necklace, Joanne Vickery carefully snips a looped wire to the desired length. 2) Classmates in fiber arts exchange ideas for unusual projects as they work with a variety of textured materials. 3) Paying strict attention to color and details, Theresa Wierzbicki adds the finishing touches to a portrait which she is painting. 4) After developing his negatives, Michael Lacny thoughtfully examines the quality and detail of his pictures by holding them over a white background.

Band, orchestra, and chorus made up the three main sections of the Morton West Music Department. The band, directed by Mr. Joseph Frantik and Mr. Tom Fiala, was split into four divisions: concert band, marching band, varsity band, and pep band. Each of the groups gave students the opportunity to play in many styles and situations. "It gives you a chance to play at assemblies, march in parades, and get to know a lot of different people," said Mary Regan. The Morton Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Mr. Robert Dvorak, performed several concerts during the year and many of its members gave musical accompaniment to the district theatre productions as well. "It's a challenge to play with a group," commented Sharon Dellinger. The several chorus classes were led by Mr. James Chiado and Mrs. Arline Robbins. "Chorus is fun," remarked Melanie Anderson, "because we find out that when we pull together we can put out a great sound." Mrs. Robbins also taught piano, a new class addition to the Music Department which met a great reception from the student body.

1) On a warm fall day jackets decorate the fence along the practice field as the band members, gathering into formation, await the order to begin marching. 2) Along with the many styles of music popular today, classical pieces often play a part in Morton's orchestra classes. 3) While examining a complicated piece of music, Mary Delgado starts to memorize its words in preparation for the Christmas choral concert. 4) As they take note of a tricky passage in their music, Cindy McDonald and Steve Czajkowski use their fingers to play a pizzicato on their basses. 5) A plastic keyboard helps Judy DeStefano to learn the position of the notes on a real piano as she follows a musical score in class piano.

Continually growing, the Business Department at Morton West presented several types of classes to assist students in gaining employment after high school. Secretarial courses included clerical training, office machines, and typing. Beth Onesti explained why she felt office machines would help with her future. "If I have to work on any of these machines, I will know how to operate them, and I will get a better job." Business courses covered the topics required by the state and gave students confidence to enter the business world. "It teaches you what to do when you get out of high school and gives you a lot of choices," commented Barb Kapsa. "You get to voice your opinions and discuss things with the class. We do fun projects that have to do with your everyday life now and in the future." Mr. Craig Lusthoff's business law class took a field trip to a federal courtroom to learn how court cases are handled. In West's many cooperative work programs, students received on-the-job experience and also received classroom instruction in their chosen fields.

1) One of Teresa Pecora's duties at Edward Don Corporation, where she works as part of a cooperative work program, is to answer calls to the office. 2) In trying to make out a family's budget, Debbie Sass discovers that money management takes a little patience and organization. 3) The first thing typing students learn is the position of the letters on the keyboard; Gary Lyttek hopes that he has mastered it correctly as he finishes typing a page. 4) With her fingers a blur over the keys Julie Jurish works on an adding machine in office machines. 5) While downtown on a field trip to visit the federal court, Tom O'Connell, Sharon Kling, Anna Scardino, and Gloria Lindo take in some Chicago sights.

Courses in home economics remained popular among both girls and boys. Many students in foods found the class especially worthwhile since they not only discovered techniques of preparing a variety of appetizing edibles but also sampled their work. "I enjoy foods," commented Donna Stulgo. "We've been working on different main courses; this week we did chicken. It tasted super." Pupils also profited from courses in clothing that taught ways of planning and creating different sorts of apparel. In house and home furnishings students received experience in choosing furniture, developing floor plans, and designing home interiors. Needlecrafts demonstrated use of color and design and introduced various types of needlework such as embroidery, knitting, and rug hooking. Family living and child development readied students for modern family life. "I took child development to learn how children tick," explained Alice Jezek. "We were all kids once, and it's interesting to learn about yourself. Child development helps you to live in a future with children."

1) While the other students and preschoolers enjoy their free time during a recess in child development class, Sue Link and a friend answer an important phone call. 2) From amidst a pile of different types of home furnishing materials, Jaymie Malarik chooses a sample piece of carpeting that she likes and shows it to Ann Buonicore for her opinion. 3) Like other students enrolled in the needlecrafts class, Barbara Caccamo discovers as she begins a new sweater project that knitting can be both a relaxing and rewarding hobby. 4) After mixing his ingredients together, Kevin Thomas finds himself "rolling in the dough" as he prepares a tasty-looking snack for the other members of his food class to sample.

'Hands on' work now brings future within reach

Students in the Industrial Arts Department took part in numerous classes and projects during the year. Their experiences assisted them in preparing for future occupations. Course offerings included drafting, printing, woodworking, auto mechanics, and a variety of other subjects. Many students found their classes both fun and worthwhile. "It's exciting because I am doing things that I like to do—making things with my hands," stated Jim Graton. Greg Chodora added, "You get to work by yourself at your own speed." The variety of courses offered gave "hands-on" experience for students. "Printing is a lot of fun," remarked Bob Conidi, "and you get something to show for what you learned. It's really impressive." Students had opportunities to work with many types of materials, tools, and equipment as they explored different occupational fields. Included among the course experiences were opportunities to work with metals, wood, and plastics in advanced classes in these specialized areas. All courses emphasized safety in the operation of equipment.

1) Before turning in his project, Ken Maxa clips the excess plastic off the edge of his duck creation for a neater appearance so that he can receive a better grade. 2) As he leans over a lathe in the machine shop, Rob Petrovich, protected by his safety glasses, works on creating metal parts. 3) With his hands coated with grease, Robert Campbell quickly obtains the necessary parts for his friend so they can complete the repairs to be made on an automobile. 4) With patience and precision, Dale Ropele sets a block of type for an assignment in his graphics arts class. 5) Carefully adjusting his T-square, Stephen Mondrowski checks the accuracy of the lines that he has drawn in architectural drafting.

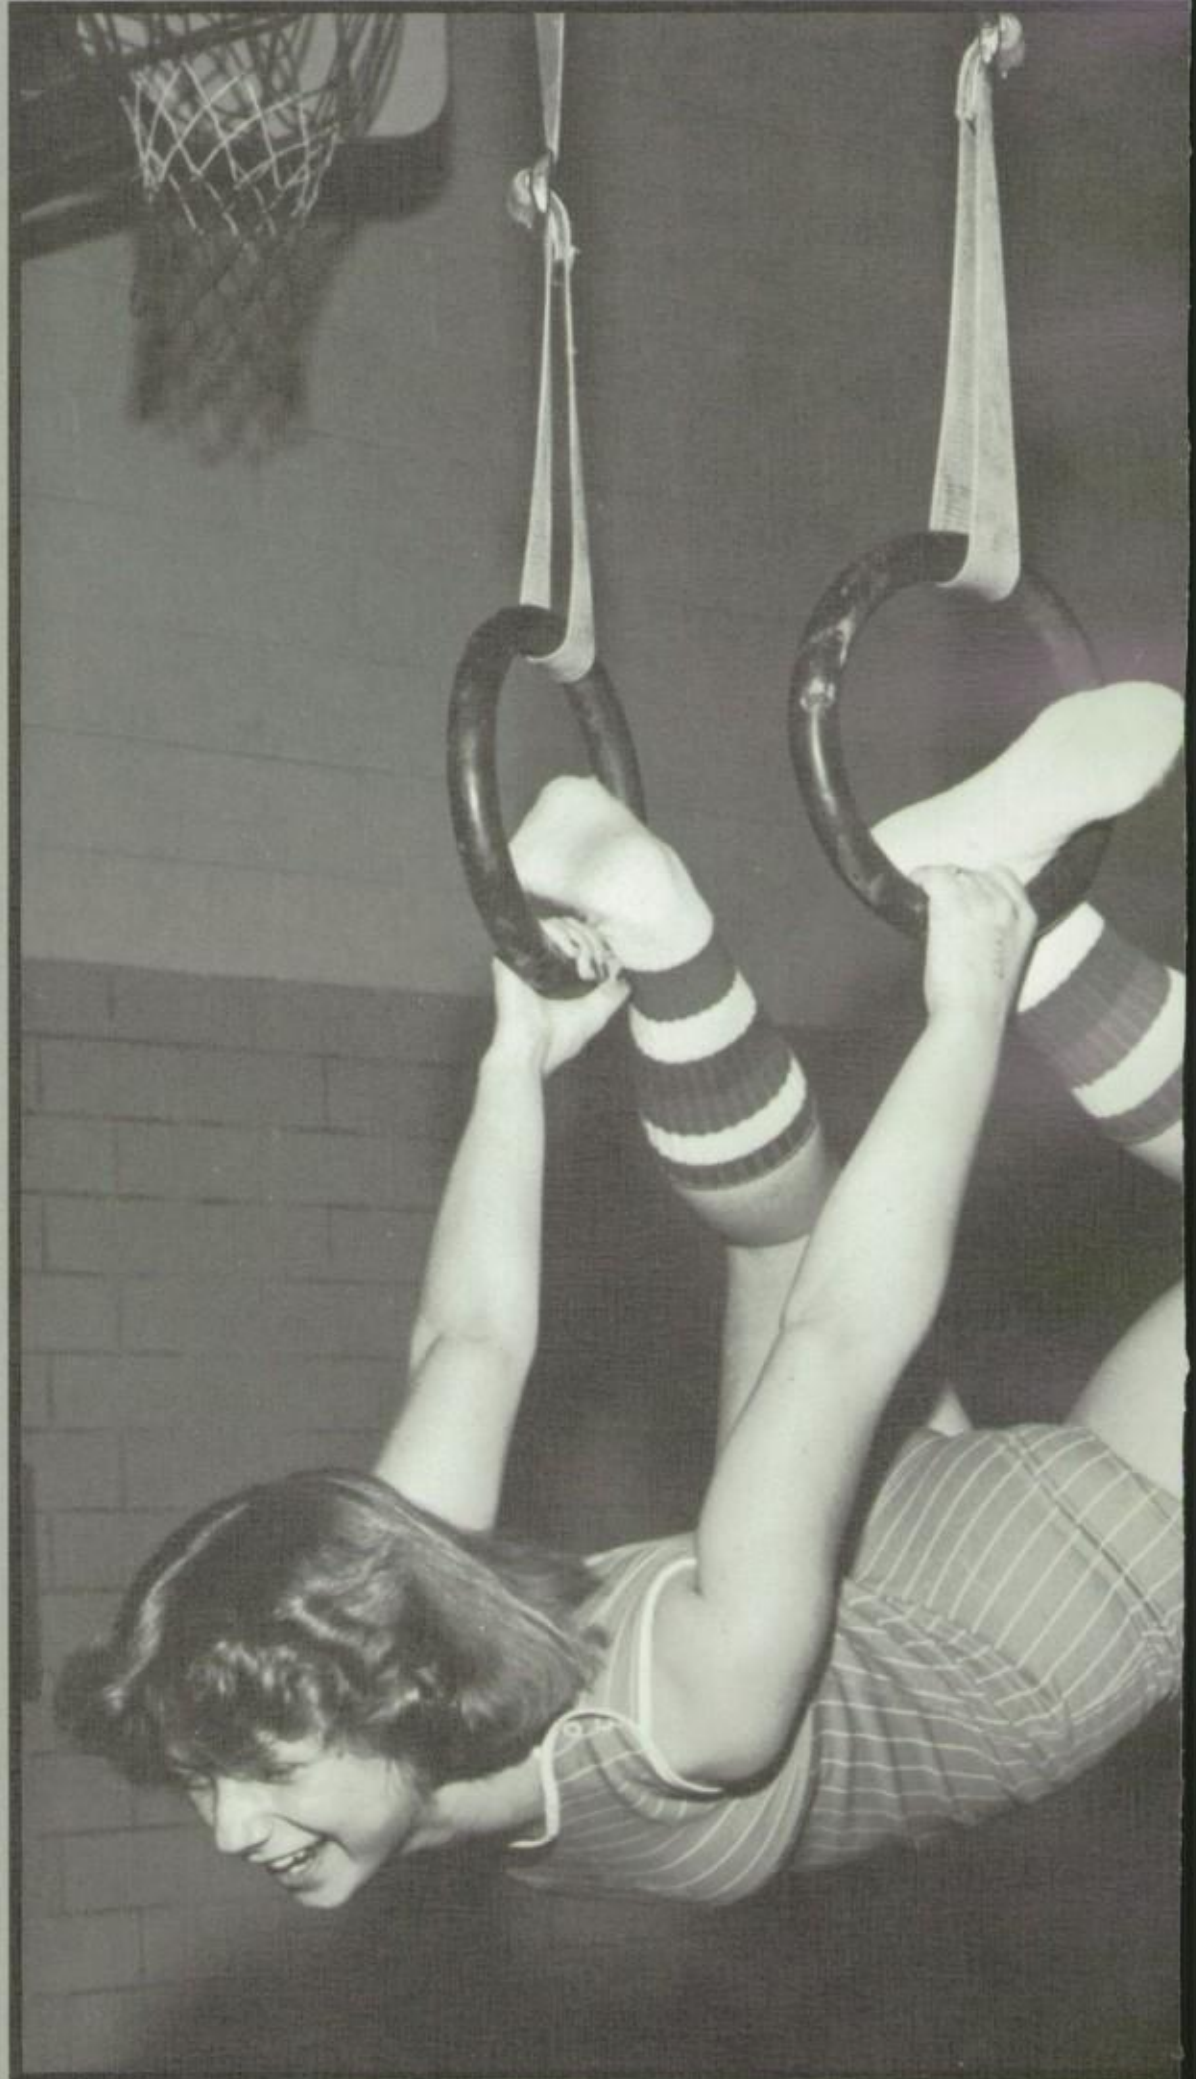

Athletes take their pick from individualized electives

Juniors and seniors continued to participate in the co-ed electives program initiated last year in the Department of Physical Education. Gym electives offered many ways for students to express themselves. Students chose from courses including individual and lifetime sports, team sports, and modern dance. Most upperclassmen were pleased with the freedom that the elective classes offered them. Allison Psenicka stated, "Modern dance helps you to express yourself as an individual." Commented Rae Bauer, "I like being able to pick my own gym. It's nice when you get the choice of what you'll be doing. Then you don't get stuck with something you really don't like." However, some students felt the new co-ed system still lacked coordination. "Because of the differences in abilities and the lack of organization, co-ed gym doesn't provide equal competition for the students involved," remarked Mike Finn. After some rearrangement of the curriculum, officials in the department planned to expand the co-ed program to include underclassmen in the upcoming year.

1) From the back of the room, Mr. Frank Duchon observes the reactions of his driving students as they encounter various road obstacles on the screen. 2) While performing during gym, Angela Comella and Mike Domas grasp the spirit of the square dance and promenade around the square. 3) With a large grin, Tina Keel demonstrates the fact that she can perform a graceful "bird's nest" on the stationary rings without falling off. 4) Intent upon returning the ball, Debbie Sinnott bites her tongue in anticipation as she speeds toward the net. 5) In a last-ditch attempt to even up the score during a vigorous basketball game, Sandy Haarmans hurriedly dribbles the ball as Lynn Argianas rushes in to thwart her drive.

Faculty

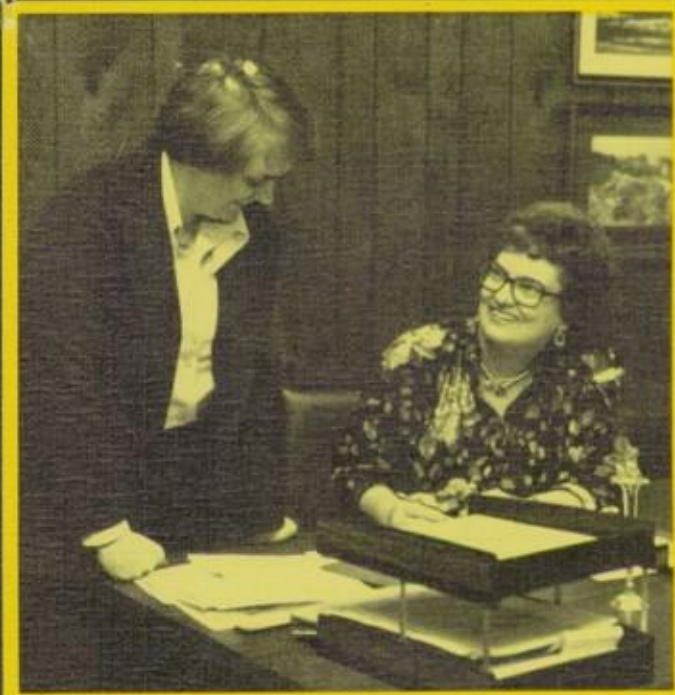

"Some of the faculty is great; others will tell you right out that they hate children. If so, why are they teaching?"

Dina Haure

"I think the faculty is pretty nice this year. Most of my teachers are nice this year. What a change!"

Dr. Ondrus approves honor point system

After months of discussion and evaluation, Dr. Joseph Ondrus with the help of his newly-enlarged student advisory council approved a new grading system. The system, designed to aid those students taking advanced courses, will go into effect in September, 1979. Under the system honor point status courses will grant an additional grade point for an earned grade of A, B, or C. Dr. Ondrus also approved a system of evaluating the faculty and administrators for the purpose of improvement of instruction.

The School Board, upon recommendation of Mr. Kenneth Keeling, business manager, approved the repairs and renovations made at Morton West this summer. Among the improvements made were the repair of the top of the stadium wall, the installation of sodium vapor lights in many areas, and the installation of new tiles and terrazo floors in the foyer and corridors of the building's first floor.

Dr. Capdevielle directs faculty workshops

Once again, Dr. Helen B. Capdevielle, curriculum director, worked closely with Mr. Robert J. Tudor, public relations director, on the development of in-service workshops for the faculty. Dr. Capdevielle also headed the district-wide faculty educational council, which was responsible for recommending curriculum changes to the superintendent and his executive committee. Under Dr. Capdevielle's leadership the educational council made recommendations to provide an evaluation procedure for new courses and to bring the Morton curriculum into compliance with state regulations. Dr. William Hutchison, principal, and Mr. Donald Ciner, assistant principal, were among the members of the executive council which consisted of the superintendent, curriculum director, business manager, public relations director, and the principals and assistant principals from both Morton schools.

In addition to working with Dr. Capdevielle, Mr. Tudor also began procedures for the development of student publication regulations.

Student supervisor lessens deans' burden

With the addition of Mr. Peter Magro as student supervisor and a beefed-up squad of paraprofessionals, Deans James Regan and Sonny Manuel observed a definite decrease in student vandalism and truancy. Mr. Magro headed the reinstated student cafeteria and hall guards, who kept the cafeteria floors free of debris and enforced the use of hall passes by students. Paraprofessionals stationed in the halls and at entrances to the building added to the overall tighter security found throughout the school. Strong security measures were also evident in the immediate vicinity as Mr. Joseph Czechowski, truant and security officer, patrolled the Riverside Mall and other local hangouts.

Secretaries located in the main office and in the department offices kept the school running smoothly by handling various clerical duties for administrators and faculty members.

Government reduces food aid

In spite of a cut in government supplied foods, Mrs. K. Franzik and Mrs. M. Iwan, heads of the cafeteria staff, found that meats, fruits, and other food items purchased through local wholesalers balanced lunch menus well and added variety to the meals prepared for students and school personnel. Mr. Harry Olmstead and Mr. Dick Hoffman made books and supplies available to the student body as usual while Mr. Rich Styma helped by keeping all the audio-visual equipment in proper working order. The maintenance staff's work completed the school services' efforts by keeping the building and grounds repaired and clean.

Sometimes little things help to make an otherwise ordinary day special. Mr. Edgar Ludwig (left) finds a moment of happiness while making the acquaintance of John Felkamp.

Accepting useful gifts of clothing for his newborn son, Ryan James, Mr. James Kurth, office occupations teacher, (above) surveys the presents with pleasure and gratitude.

Classes

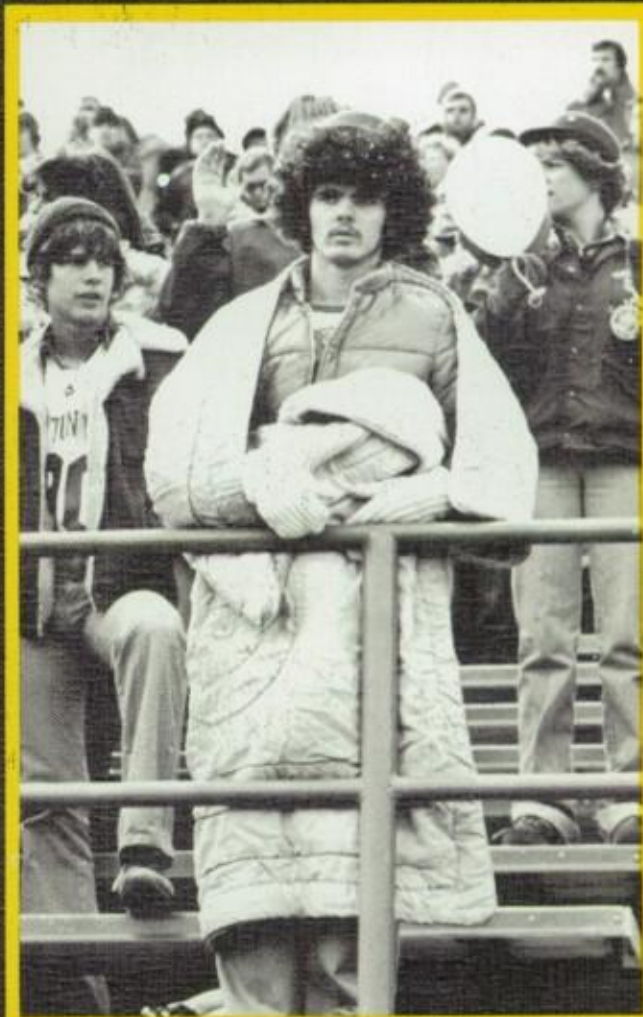

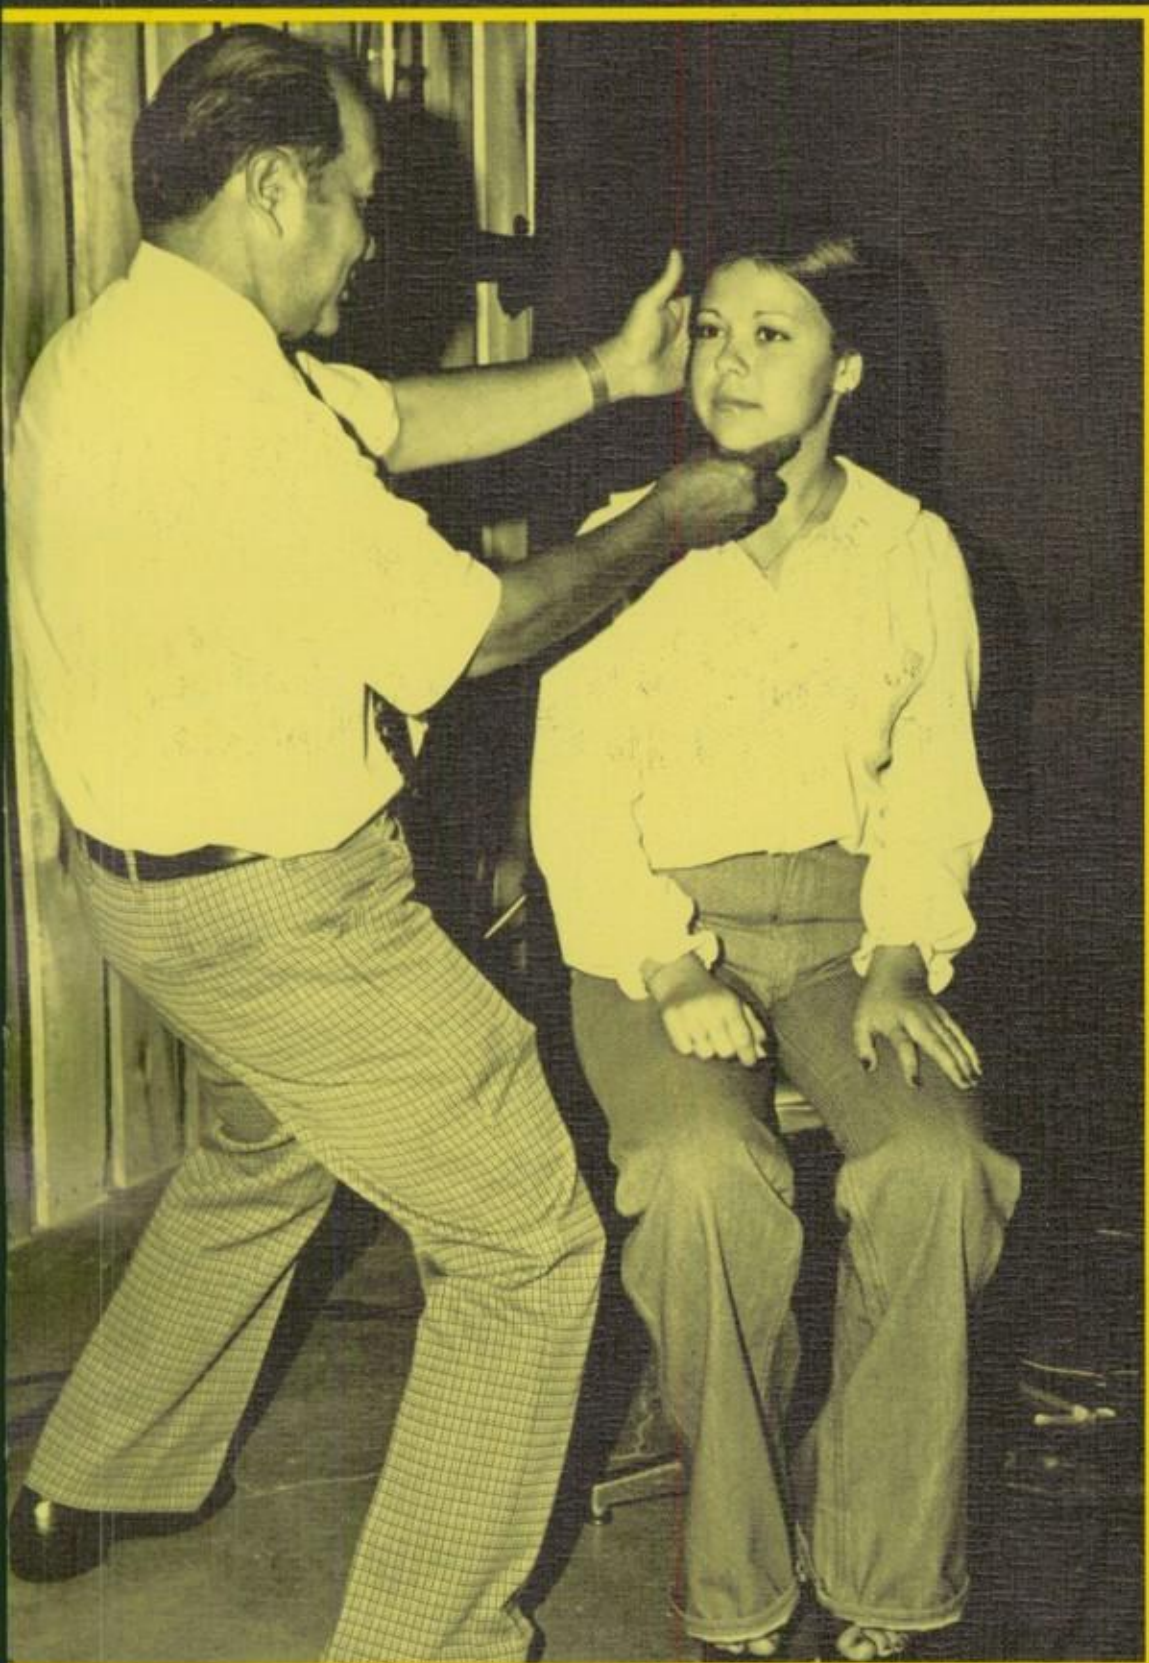

"There are many different people in each year. Some seniors act like freshmen and visa versa. For true opinions of people, we should delve beneath such labels."

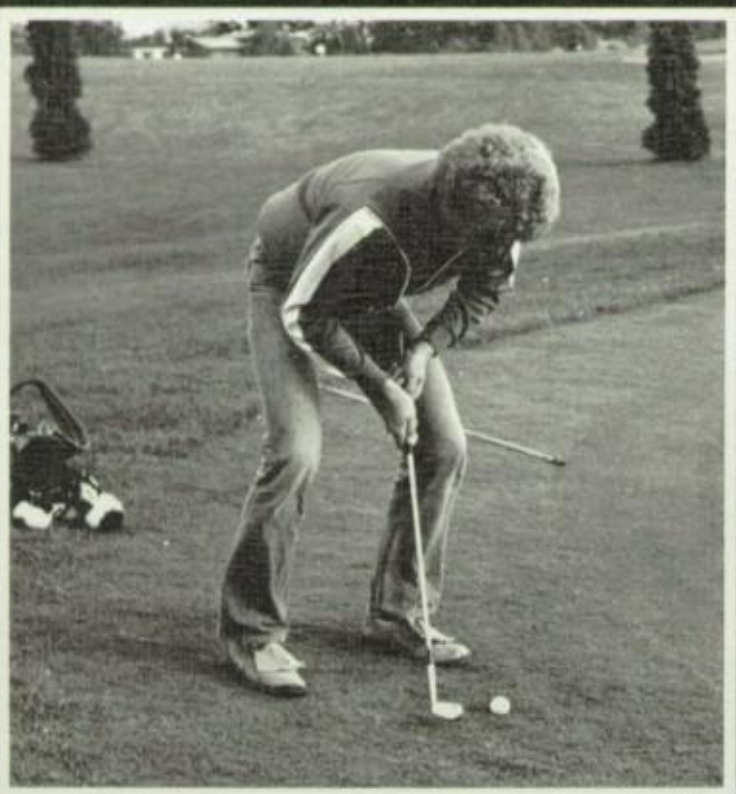

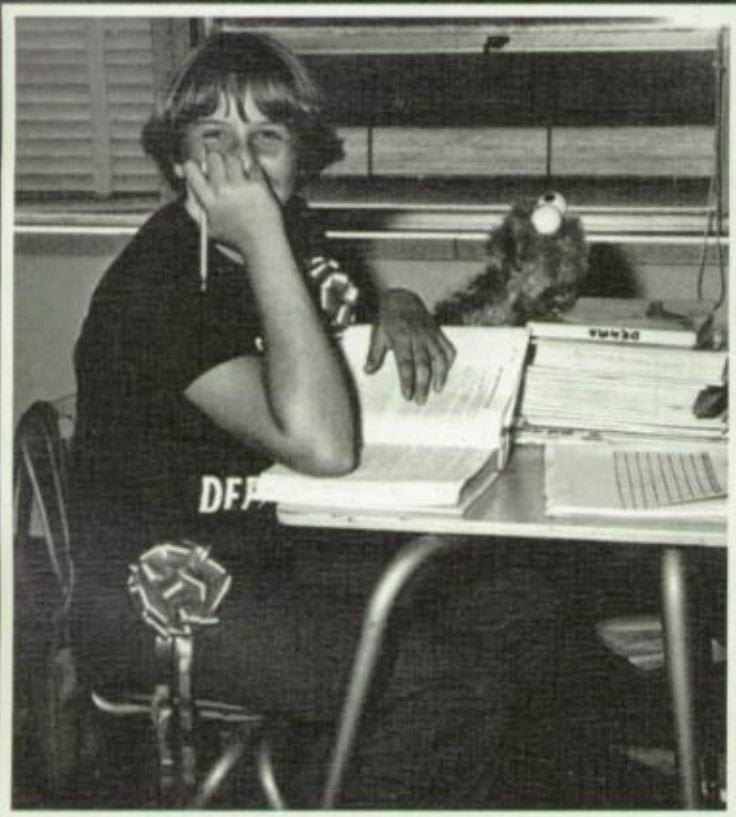

Dan Pompei

"Some of the students act like real jerks, thinking they are the greatest, foxiest, all around best guy (or girl) in the whole school."

Peggie Finn

Freshmen

"Beginners stuck in a world of sophomores, juniors, and seniors. Also stuck in a world, for the most part, of insults and criticism."

John Jordan

"They're okay even though my friends and I kid them all the time. I think the reason for that is because we got the same treatment."

Scott Splavec

With the exception of fanciful and elaborate costumes, life at West goes on normally on Halloween. Annamarie Campanelli, decked out in her furry attire, stops off to handle some urgent business with the cashier.

Joining with the scores of interested people enjoying Morton West's homecoming parade, a statue of Abraham Lincoln and friends views the spectacle as it passes in front of Lincoln Federal Savings and Loan.

Daily hassles make coping hard

1) With a cast on his arm, Gerard Riffel finds it is quite a trick to carve a Halloween pumpkin. 2) A romp in the autumn leaves replaces a weekend of studying for Peggie Finn, Alice Jezek, and Joann Kakacek. 3) Another of the year's false fire alarms disrupts classes, much to the annoyance of all involved. 4) Faced with the task of returning some equipment to the AV room, Sue Dombroso and Kelly Sinnott suddenly face a flight of stairs. 5) When the pressures of school life come down their hardest, students often seek solitude as an escape.

2

"I realize that para-professionals are needed, but it does get out of hand. It feels like a prison. You can't even walk down the hall."

Doreen Preber

"The worst thing is they keep changing a person's schedule, and late in the year, too. Why can't they get things straight?"

Diane Argianas

Look back, move on

1) Inspired by the show "Reminiscing", swimmers lead the student body in remembering simpler days. 2) With four years of high school education behind him, Dale Cybulski confronts a time for decision making. 3) After a day of lectures, facts, and figures, an exit sign lights the way to activities in the outside world.

"It has prepared me for the future, but I don't actually know what kind of future it has prepared me for."

Jack Yuen

& it is too bad I couldn't go to Reserved any of the games with you guys, — it sounded like fun. Whenever we start talking nobody ever knew what we would be talking about, because we could rattle on and on & not make any sense to anyone listening but we would know what we are talking about. (It doesn't make any sense the way I wrote it, but you know what I mean) We had some bad times & some good times, but the hell with the bad times, I'm glad ^{at least} that nobody wrote on this page so I can get everything is. I'm glad you're going to camp because it is so much fun, but also a lot of work: next year,
band should be a lot of fun, but we're going to miss a lot of the senior (go

Lisa,
Hello, how are you? It's been great this year, Cubs games, etc, I really loved getting to know you. I know not what really to say.
We've had, will have great times. See ya soon

Mr Stallman
Greg

Lisa
How's the ~~world~~ ^{world treating} you?
It was great with you here this year, Band parties would be nothing without you.
If you can read this you got to be ~~good~~ ^{good} because my writing sucks
Till later
Bob Kuo

Lisa,
It was great in Algebra this year.
Good luck over your next three years
here! Have a fantastic Summer and Keep in touch!
Ruth Regan

I've been fun having you in English this year. Have a nice summer and
Good luck next year
Friends, I'm black

Lisa,
you are just about the strangest Person I know. It was excellent getting to know you during marching band. Hope to get you in some classes next year
See you in Summer Band

Later,
Dan Vitous
P.S. Stay away from the Church (34th & Clinton).

Lisa,
I'm really glad we're friends. Have fun and Good Luck in everything. See ya this summer.
It's been great this year, Lisa, having you in algebra, meeting you in Band & Gym. Have a nice summer. Even though a nice summer. See you next year. Good luck Kup out of all the trouble. Hope to see you next year.
Lisa,
How's the Heck are ya
friends, Lisa,
How's the Heck are ya
Wolf's Hope to see

Dear Lisa,
Even though you are the strangest person I've ever met, nevertheless you are one of the nicest.
I hope you see you next year.
Your friend,
George Constantine Chipman

Dear Lisa,
You're the craziest,
strangest, weirdest person
I have ever met, that's why I like having you around. It was fun having you in algebra class. I even thought you were a genius.

Good luck
You're the craziest girl in the class, and if I have you in any more classes I will go nuts.
Good luck
But you're an excellent talker. I talked to yourself most of the time. Scott
But anyway.
Have a nice summer (without me). Good luck in the next 3 years.
Your friend
Cathy
Simon

Lisa,
It's been great knowing you. You're a great friend and Good Luck always.
See you next year. Love,
Laura Stirrat P.S.

coats are comin'.

Rice,
It was nice getting to know you this year. You are one of the strangest persons I have ever met.
(only kidding)
Your friend,
Chris
